SOMETHING WORTH SEEING. The Famous scullers train

AT ST. Louis.

The Two First-Named to Compete In the Doubles—Teemer Will Row At Austin—The Brookdale Handicap Won By Charade—The Horses of Messrs. Higgins, Daly and Smith Arrive.

When the sad, drear light of these May mornings begins to break and the owl to nod and to wink, there are signs of activity and exhibitions of muscularity out at Creve Cœur Lake, says The St. Louis Chronicle.

Jake Gaudaur, renowned oarsman and good fellow, and George Hosmer, once so rapid in a single scull, are shaping themselves out at Creve Cœur for the coming regatta at Austin, Tex., which takes place June 4.

Gaudaur and Hosmer are to contest in the double scull event of this regatta, which is really to be an international affair, as Stanbury, the Australian champion, and McLean, the other lusty antipodean, are to compete in the single scull at Apstin.

Gaudaur came in yesterday with Hosmer. Both declare themselves to be fit already

The Richest and Best Dressed Window in the City.

The merchant who expects to do any business in this 19th century must not neglect to secure the confidence of the public, the most potent factor of success. Advertising, though a mighty lever, will not always convince, since it may be despive, but facts do not deceive; when we see the goods with prices attached there can be no mistake. Hence it is that window-dressing is so important. It is quite an art, and everyone cannot succeed in producing the proper effect. The window must first attract attention by artistic arrangement of goods, the proper blending of colors and the unity and beauty of design. Then the prices should be such as to invite closer inspection and secure a purchaser. This is the object and criterion of a good window, to induce the public to enter and buy. The window of Guinane Bros., 214 Yong-street, is just such a window. The background is formed of four pyramids of shoes; the body of the window window. Gaudaur came in yesterday with Hosmer.
Both declare themselves to be fit already for the Austin races, and they look it.

Gaudaur has reduced several pounds, though he never carried any superfluous weight for an athlete of his proportions. His chief object in the daily practice that he now takes is to shake from his bones the stiffness that naturally comes with a winter area that their chances in the double to win are decidedly good, and he looks through rosy glasses on his prospects in the daily practice ship and an anagonist, Stanbury, though he says the Autipodean's chances in the race depend greatly on the effect the change of climate has on his training.

An carman, he says, is affected more by a change of climate than any other athlete, and this influence is due to the radical difference of the waters and $2\text{ the extent of their training.}

An coarman, he says, is affected more by a change of climate than any other athlete, and this influence is due to the redical difference of the waters and $2\text{ the extent of their training.}

Two hours' slow work on the lake daily is the extent of their training.

While Gaudaur and Hosmer are shaping for the great Autin regatta at Creve Ceur Lake John Teemer, who will be one of their contestants in the single scull, is indulging in daily practice spins on the rives; This work, together with the exercise he gets as trainer and coach for the Westerna, many of whom will stand to win a goodly bit if he beats out Gaudaur in the single scull.

Ottawa, May 17.—Football is booming at Ottawa College, and a strong effort is being made to bring in young players by a series of inter-class matches for a college championship cup. A number of promising young players are being developed, and they will be wanted, as Clarke, Newman, Proderick, Cullen, Smith, Meagher, White and French of the old time footballers will all graduate this year and create so many vacancies.
