THE testimonial on the last page of PAPER AND INK was entirely unsolicited and the recommendation speaks for itself. The Laughlin Fountain Pens are equal to the highest grade pens manufactured and we guarantee every pen sold.

A Novelty.---We have just received a large consignment of Superfine Japanese Fancy Tissue Paper in two styles, white and delicate tints, with handsome designs. These papers are specially made for the retail dry goods trade and those handling fine goods, being suitable for wrapping small parcels containing laces, gloves, ribbons, etc., and also for jewellers for wrapping jewellery and fine silver articles. To those merchants who take pride in wrapping up their goods attractively, these papers prove great favorites. We are selling this paper at $1.50 per ream, and shall be pleased to furnish a full set of samples showing the patterns. Special quotations to those requiring a quantity.

If the word advertising suggests nothing but fraud to a man, that does not settle the meaning of the word, but the nature of that man's mind.

CYRIL DAVENPORT, of the British Museum, says that Holland is the country which, more than any other, nearly approaches England in the variety of its historic bindings. The Dutch bindings, however, are generally copies from French originals.

A new paper-cutting machine has been patented in France which is worked by a hydraulic apparatus that controls both the locking of the paper and the action of the knife. The block is automatically unlocked and the knife raised every time the latter has done its work.
