Or we might have gone into a cheap street, if such can be found, and bought a small lot and built a cheap house; in either case we would have looked to our own local worship and financial case. But our work contemplated a wider purpose than the ease of a small local congregation. It was meant, in the first place, to work to succeed at large must succeed in the cities, and especially in the Capital city. Toronto is becoming the great religious and educational control of the Province, we may say of Canada, and many people are being attracted here from the States. We cannot afford, therefore, to hide our light in out-of the-way corners and streets. If we wish to influence the religious mind of the day in the minds of our own people, we must have a growing religious and educational interest in this great centre. Strong congregations are contributors as the contributors are contributors as the city. The canadard.

The Canadian Evangelist content to us greatly improved in every way, a handsome looking, live and califying paper. It indicates growth and progress in that region, and we greatly rejoice therein. If we in Toronto were financially able to de all this ourselves we would feel less justified in calling upon our brethren for help. But we are not able. We have undertaken what we have in faith, and hope that generous hands would be extended in a common cause. Our burden is extremely heavy. Our lot cost $7,200. Land is very high in this city.
