appears to-day in the editorial columns of the Mail :

"Tonosto, August 26, 1878 .- The undersigned to-day called upon His Grace, the Archbishop of Toronto, and represented to him that rumors were being circulated that there had been serious difference and mis-understanding between Sir John Macdonald and His Grace. We were happy to learn from the lips of His Grace hunself that such rumors were without any foundation whatever.

"JAMES J. FOY. The Globe to-day refers to the Catholic Convention of Tuesday night and the part taken by John O'Donohoe, its organizer. O'Donohoe is accused of joining hands with Sir John, and being guided by his counsels. Allusion is made to the defeat of O'Donohoe in East Toronto, but the Globe does not tell its readers that the present Reform candidates for lenged the party to fight. The challenge Centre and East Toronto refused to support party was not loth to accept, and befor O'Donohoe, one of them abstaining from voting while the other voted against him. "civil and religious liberty" champion O'Donohoe is also accused by the Globe of lay on the ground, asking torgiveness being an aspirant to a seat in the Cabinet, an and promising never more to be guilty of lik impossibility, it says, as he had no portfolio conduct. After having made an abject vacant. Seats were found on other occasions for newly-made Cabinet Ministers, and and rejoin his comrade, who at the beginning O Donohoe and his friends say one could of the trouble valiantly ran away. The two easily have been made for him if the Reformers had been so disposed.

The Mail to-day publishes a five column report of the Convention's proceedings, which is admitted by both parties to be impartial.

His Lordshi tolic delegate, Bishop Conroy. His Lordshi Bishop Fabre officiated, and was assisted t the Rev. Fathers Callahan and Leclaire. The church was crowded by the Iris and a good many French Catholics from a parts of the city. The Choir of St. Patrick gave out the music, which was of a solemn and impressive character.

> About 11 o'clock on Monday night tw able-bodied Kingston Orangemen, belongin to the steamer "Shickluna," while walkin along the wharf, indulged in some rathe boisterous language, and expressed their de sire to meet some of the Irish Catholic Unio men. Their remarks were for the time un heeded, and the matter would have ende there had not one of them pulled out a orange-colored handkerchief, which he wave over his head, saying, "That's my color. A young lad named Gareau who happened to be on the sidewalk was struck on the forehead and knock senseless. A spectator then rushed over and the mob dispersed. The wound on the boy's forehead was not very dangerous and with the assistance of some persons by he soon got round. The Catholic inhabitants of that place are about to petition the authorities for a larger force of police, as the orgies of these rowdies, the lowest scum of the streets, are becoming unbearable to all the respectable portion of the community.

CARDINAL MANNING ON IRISH SUNDAY CLOSING.

A very large meeting was held on Sunday on Tower Hill, convened by the Temperance League of the Cross. Cardinal Manning presided. The Cardinal announced, amidst prolonged cheering, the third reading of the Irish Sunday Closing Bill. His Emi-nence added that he feared there was not time left for the bill to be passed through the other House of the Legislature this session, and therefore he feared that all the labor, all the patience, and all the vigor with which resistance to the bill was met, would be lost, for this year at least. The work would have to be begun over again. That great movement had begun in the diocese of Ferns. The good Bishop Furlong, of Ferns, who had gone to his rest, told him that the first thing which induced him to promote the closing of public-houses on Sunday was a sight he witnessed when going home after saying high mass on a Sunday. He saw a fine young man of 23, in all the strength and vigor of youth, carried by men, his head broken and dripping with blood. A drunken quarrel, ending in a fight in a public house, had murdered that young man. Good Bishop Furlong told him that he went home, sickened by the sight, fell on his knees, and said, " My God, is it not pos sible to do something to put an end to this shame-this scandal of drunkenness and murder on the Lord's Day !" Bishop Furlong made up his mind , to do all he could to get the publicans in his diocese to close their houses on Sunday, and with such success did he work that not only the Catholic publicans but those who were not Catholics, shut their houses on the Lord's Day. (Cheers.) Well, a bill to make the law passed the third reading in the Commons yesterday, and, God helping, they would have it passed in both houses next year. (Loud cheers.) When the Act is in force in Ireland the good results flowing from it would get it passed for England. (Great cheering.) Scotland had it already; Ireland would have it next, and the blessed winds of temperance and pace blowing upon Eng-land from the north and west will soon settle land from the north and west will soon settle a Sunday Closing Act in her midst. (Cheers.) So much good has been done by the League in London amongst the Irish residents that the magistrates had declared that on the
