An eminent railroaler, whose correspondence would fill a train, lately asked a young woman, in anticipation of a business letter, what was the proper way to begin a letter to a young woman, and was relieved that she scorned a letter which did not "my dear" her. But how to go at the Queen. The Emperors, Kings and Kinglets address one another as brother or cousin. But the Queen, while she recognizes any one of royal birth, white, brown or black, from the beastly Shah to Kapiolani, can not recognize the President of the Republic as akin, and so Cleveland could not consin her.

Her title is "Queen of Great Britain and Ireland," and latterly—by a trade she made of the title of Earl of Beaconsfield with Disraeli—Em-title of Earl of Beaconsfield with Disraeli-Empress of India Anciently France was in the title of dominion, but dropped out. So did the title, "Defender of the Faith," which the pious Henry VIII. gained by his pen and kicked over by his doing. But Cleveland thought that this personal letter from one sovereign to another ought to have a touch more akin than her stately official title. So after much pondering he began it with "Great and G of Friend." The Queen must have recognized this as American. The native have recognized this as American. The native Americans call the President their Great Father, as they used to call the King. To address her as Great Mother might not jive with her motherly exclusiveness. But Great and Good Friend avoids this, and yet comes so uear to the aborigi al Great Father that the Queen recognized it as the native style of the lead of which sho things. By Datter a sample land of which she thinks RED SHIRT a sample. The "great" is of her station; tae "good" of the quality of her friendship. But it lacks the real George Washington single truth. The Republic can know nothing of her friendship save through the conduct and spirit of her Government. And that rejoiced in our calamity, exulted in our break up, threw open the British ship-yards to make it so, and ordered her fleet to sail in and finish the dissolution on a mere technical cause. She is no more a great and good friend to this Republic than Cleve-land is a great father to White Cloud and Red Shirt.

"Great AND GCOD FRIEND—In the name and on behalf of the people of the United States. I present their sincere felicitations upon the arrival of the liftieth anniversary of your Majacty's accession to the crown of Great your Majesty's accession to the crown of Great Britain.

Felicitations "upon the arrival of the fiftieth!" Felicitate a damrel upon the arrival of her fortieth year! Felicitate the higher upon each year! Felicitate a man upon the arrival each year! Felicitate a man upon the arrival of the end of his fourth score! Felic tate him that he has got almost to the farthest scratch! The "people of the United States" have no behalf" in such clumsy felicitations.

"I but utter the general voice of my fellowcountrymen in wishing for your people the prolongation of a reign so marked with advance in popular well being, physical, moral and intellectual."

"I but utter." Not the fine sense of euphony which puts it, "I but utter," instead of the less fine, "I utter but." Putting the but before the utter gives a buttery sound, befitting the Queen, whose traditional feed is bread and honey.

But does this but utter the general but utternee? The "edvance in popular well-utterance? The "advance in popular well-being" is a figure of speech. Is it fair or friendly to the Prince of Wales to wish the prolongation of her reign?

"It is justice and not adulation to acknowledge the debt of gratitude and respect due to your personal virtues for their important influence in producing and causing the pros-perous and well ordered condition of affairs now generally prevailing throughout your dominions.

He informs her that he is not flattering her. He informs her that he is not nattering her.
It is justice, not adulation. "The debt of gratitude for personal virtues! Whose debt?
Who owes her anything for personal virtues.
The British female is generally proper, and has the domestic virtues. Do those impose a debt. of gratitude on anybody? The Queen is a re spectable woman, and a good provider for number one. She has been a respectable figurehead for John Bull's Government, and has brought up his calves as well as she could, albeit her he-ones are pretty fat. But by what chemical process are her per sonal virtues converted into the prosperity good order of the Empire? This transmutation of personal virtues into material forces would of personal virtues into material forces would approach the power of mind to move matter, which would be the very creation.

Cleveland, who found the office of Sheriff more to his genius than Blackstone, does not know the constitution of the British Government. It is not governed by the virtues of the sovereign, like Persia and Ashantee, but by Parliment Parliament. Do prosperous and well crdered conditions prevail throughout her dominions? Does Cleveland but utter the voice of his Irish voters in this? It is a well-ordered Government that spends three months in passing a coercion bill?

Does the argument that in Ireland banded resistance has made the law powerless argue good order? Is not the main cause the misery of the people? Could be not send a ceremonial congratulation without a certificate to the prosperity of her dominions, and ascribing it to her personal virtues?

Millions of British females are as virtuous as the Queen, and enjoy cakes and ale as well. Her social principle is that all her subjects ords and commons—are alike beneath her. The influence of her personal virtues should be on the morals of the society of high rank. The common report is of a moral corruption in aristocratic society in the half century, and that the virtues of the British temale are in the middle class. As to the society of her imperial rank, she could not or did not set up a moral line. The English pride was humbled when the took into intigrate social relations that she took into intimate social relations that debauché, Louis Napoleon, who to his moral corruption added the political crime of stealing into the place of Emperor by treachery and into the place of Emperor by treachery and assassination.

It is a question if the dominions owe any debt of gratitude to the Queen's personal virtues or government. Ireland denies it. The Coercion Bill expresses her mind. She is personally hostile to Gladstone. Disraeli fickled her with the title Empress of India. What does it represent? A hundred millions of people ground down by British tax collectors—the British Crown, the landlord of alt, and the native people oppressed by taxes for revenue to nay for their own conquest. Her conquests are pay for their own conquest. Her conquests are blight upon all native populations.

a What had Disraeli done when she gave him he title of Earl to pay for hers of Empress? He had led the Sultan by expectation of British support to defy the Czar, to the downfall of Turkey. He proclaimed that he brought from the Berlin Congress "ceace with honor." Was it with British honor? He had tempted Turkey to her downfall. He had then declared with a high moral tone that Russia must submit her treaty with the Sultan to "the public opinion of Europe." In the august Congress called to adjudge that opinion, he appeared with a secret treaty in his pocket, made beforehand with the Sultan for the cession of Cyprus. with the Sultan for the cession of Cyprus.

with the Sultan for the cessuen of Cyprus.

After he had taken part in adjudging as if impartially the public opinion of Europe in curtailing the Russian treaty, he disclosed his secret treaty. That was peace with honor, and it fitly earned his title of Earl. Beacousfield, with Gladstone for the finisher, brought Egypt to ruin. Where in all this wretched business were the potency and influence which Claveland ascribes to the Queen's per onal virtues? He concludes his composition with this:—

He concludes his composition with this:-"May your life be prolonged, and practs honor and prosperity bless the people over whom you have been called to rule. May liberty flourish throughout your Empire under just and equil laws, and your Government be strong in the affections of all who live under it. And I pray God to have your Majesty in His holy keeping.

"GROVER CLEVELAND.

"T. F BAYARD, Secretary of State. Amen! May the Queen have less consideration for her station and more for the hapless millins under her Empress rule. Cleveland makes a draft on heaven in her favor. But God is not a respecter of persons, and the Queen will there find her level. Blessings are cheap. But the gift of a shilling will receive more and better spoken from anyone of a score of Irish women on the landing-place at Queenstown, women on the landing-place at Queenstown. May Cleveland, who herps superfluous benedictions on the Queen, have some for home sowing. His Harvard speech, his malignant Gettysburg letter, his accusing withdrawal of his St. Louis acceptance, and several other of his utterances at home, sound as if his cuiver were full of maledictions.

* * A parliamentary government with A parliamentary government with all things done in the Queen's name, with the great statesmen and real rulers paying homage to her, and she saying "my government," "my army, my navy," and so on, is a travesty. The Queen's high mightiness and conceit magnity the absurday. She has behaved tolerably well, but has had to be checked. During all his life the Prince Consort was unpopular by the belief the that has to make at interference in the Government. that her attempts at interference in the Government were prodded by him in trying to advance his German autocratic ideas.

The way that Disraeli cajoled her, and her vanity in desiring the title of Empress of India —Empress of a conquered and enslaved country —were not creditable to her. When Gladstone led the canvas that overthrew Beacon-field, the Queen, because of her dislike of Gladstone, resisted the public will until she was advised that she could not safely do it. She had to submit to the humiliation of calling Gladstone to form a go ernment. But after that she kept up a backstairs counseling with Beaconsfield.

She now is for coercion in Ireland. If she should again have to call in G'adstone to change should again have to call in Gradstone to change that policy it would be a bitter pill. She is a respectable Queen. The procession of half a century has moved along. She his moved it, as the wooden juggernaut moves his grand car. The incense of personal flatt ry may be swung under her wonted nose, but the voice of the people of the United States does not certify that the British Government is a great and good friend, nor that it has made the Empire well ordered and prosperous.

In the half century of her reign, Great Britain has ceased to exercise any influence in the poli-tics of Europe. She has ceased to be regarded as a protector of the weak States against the powerful. Witness Denmark. So far as she has meddled she has sacrificed what she befriended. Witness Turkey. She has gained the character of aggression on the weak and of cringing to the strong. Witness her unnatural alliance with the Emperor Napoleon and her indifference to the dismemberment of France. She had nothing to say when Louis Napoleon overthrew te Republic of Mexico, to set up despotic gov rnment by conquest.

In the Queen's reign was the opium war on China-a monstrous crime by a Christian Queen on a prean nation. In the rule of her favorite, Distable, wars of aggression were made in Afghanistan and South Africa so unjustifiable Afghantean and South Africa to injustinante that his successor and her antipathy, Gladstone, withdrew them. The British traditional policy of maintaining Turkey as a European power has been so badly managed in her reign that it has brought the downfall of Turkey. In her time Great Britain has exercised no bene-ficial influence in the affairs of the nations.

Her government has blighted Egypt. Her traditional host lity to Russia only makes a danger without retarding the progress of that mpire. Great Britain has no friends in Europe. In the presence of despotic governments in all Europe—France, Germany, Austria, Russia and the rest—the Queen's government exulted in what it believed the final break-up of the only other great free gov-ernment in the world, and the one which by race, language. religion and institutions is in a large degree akin. Hers is the only government from which this Republic has reason to apprehend nostility. Its friendship in time of trouble would be the same again as it was in

But a letter from a Democratic President to the Queen is not an easy job. Also in the fresh conceit of liters ry style the labor is prone to run so exclusively to the arrangement of words as to be unconscious of the sense. Compliments to women are apt to run to excess. In straining the flattery up to the high pitch of her station, Cleveland forgot the Irish voters in the rear, and was unconscious of propriety, history, good sense and the quality of constitutional government. At the dinner of the New England Society there were a number of brilliant speeches, but none more eloquent, patriotic or humorous than the one made by Mr. Grady of the Atlanta Constitution. In the course of his remarks he related the following story:—There was an old preacher once who told some boys of the Bible present the morning. lesson he was to read in the morning.
