5. As an alternative to own aircraft same-plane services, one designated airline of Canada may enter into co-operative arrangements for the purpose of code sharing (selling transportation under its own code on the flights of another airline) subject to the regulatory requirements normally applied by the aeronautical authorities of Ukraine to such arrangements. A second designated airline of Canada may operate code sharing services subject to approval of the aeronautical authorities of Ukraine. Code sharing services shall be permitted on the flights of any two airlines that operate scheduled air services to/from the Points in Ukraine. One intermediate point shall be available for the purposes of code sharing and that point may be changed each IATA season or such lesser period as may be agreed by the aeronautical authorities of Ukraine. Effective March 31, 1999 two intermediate points shall be available for the purposes of code sharing. For the purposes of code sharing services the designated airline of Canada shall be entitled to transfer traffic between aircraft.
