

and the effective action it must take, will not be frustrated by the exercise of the veto. Any such tactic would be unconscionable and would be widely - and rightly - interpreted as a tacit admission of culpability.