Homely and Aged Faces Now Easily Beautified

I have seen the plainest women made beautiful and the complexions of good looking women improved—I've seen oldish faces made young and pretty, blemished and weather-beaten faces made spotless, white and satiny—in less than two weeks, by a very simple and harmless process that acts almost like a miracle. This is all there is to it: Ordinary mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store (one ounce will do) is applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings. This gradually peels off the lifeless particles of surface skin, permitting the underlying skin to show itself. The newer, fresher skin, when wholly in evidence, forms a complexion which for beauty and youthfulness is incomparable with one produced by other means. A complexion so natural, so free from artificiality, no one guesses the secret of its acquirement. You'll, not regret trying this marvelous treatment.

Equally wonderful is the famous saxolite formula for removing wrinkles. One ounce powdered saxolite is dissolved in a half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this immediately erases the finer lines. Gradually even the deeper furrows and crow's feet vanish completely.

Punishing a Child than a baby just learning to talk and beginning to run about. He has so many charming ways, and each new accomplishment is so absorbingly interesting. At the very worst his misdemeanors do not irritate us.and usually they are amusing. It is far pleasanter and easier to divert the child's attention than to take him sericusly; and so, since there is no good stoppingplace, he is coaxed and indulged until he is no longer a baby. But the habits that wore amusing in the two-year-old cease to be funny at four or five, and at seven or eight they begin to be unendurable; and it is a sad fact that punishment usually begins at an age when there should be no further occasion for it, and when, to confess the truth, it often does more harm than good. As the baby faults grow more and more irritating the child himself grows less and less appealing. We can punish now, and we do. We are sure that a child of his age "ought to know better." tho just why it might be hard to tell. It is certainly no fault of his that seven-year-old naughtiness is less attractive than the baby variety, and habit is a powerful antagonist.

It is perfectly safe to say that every teresting. At the very worst his mis-onist.

It is perfectly safe to say that every child will require punishment at some time. It is absolutely certain that some time from some source in some way, he will receive his share of the world's discipline. In babyhood it is light; later it is severe. In babyhood there are no bad habits to combat; later the habits are a part of the child. In babyhood the grief is soon forgotten; later hunsiliation and resentment live in the heart and often embitter the dearest ties. In view of these perfectly obvious truths the fact that we do not wish to discipline the baby becomes the chief reason why we ought to discipline him. If we wait until we wish to punish him our own motives are degrading; what should be education becomes retailation; and neither our judgment. tion becomes retaliation; and neither our judgment nor our justice is to be

The house gown in Empire style is always a pretty one. This one takes graceful lines and, while it is as simple as a negligee, it has a trimmer, more dressy effect, It is finished with an open neck and rolling collar almost as a matter of course, for such is the prevailing style. The skirt is cut in four pieces. The blouse is a simple one with a tuck overeach shoulder. The shaping at the waist line gives the whole gown a smart and distinctive effect. When the sleeves are made long, they are gathered into plain bands. All sorts of pretty materials can be used for such a gown. At this season, voile is especially to be desired, challis is none too warm for some women and there are many cotton broché fabrics that are charming while the standard fabrics are always in use. Dresden voile with the collar and cuffs of lace and the bands of plain color would make a charming effect.

WIFE SAVES HUSBAND FROM ANGERED BULL

She Set Dog at Animal and Dragged Helpmate Out of Corral.

(Special to The Toronto World).

BOISE, Idaho, July 22.—But for the bravery of his wife, who attacked an angered bull with only the help of a dog, Gus Anderson, a prominent rancher, and candidate for county commissioner at the last election, would have been a dead man, and as it is he is in an extremely precarious condition.

Mr. Anderson, who lives on a ranch near the Soldiers' Home, went out to the corral to milk some cows, when a buil which was in the corral with the bull which was in the corral with the other animals came upon him from the rear, knocked him over, and before he could protect himself in any way had trampled him.

His wife, hearing his cries for help, appeared in time to witness the attack of the animal, and calling a big dog which belongs to the ranch, she set him at the bull and succeeded in dragging her badly injured husband out of the corral while the dog was worrying the animal.

An Electric Iron requires no nerve-straining, foot-tiring trudging to and fro between ironing-board and range, for the plain reason that no fire is needed. You simply attach cord to light socket and—IRON! The point is always hot; needs no waxing, and one iron does the work.

Imagine, if you can, any way to make the job of ironing simpler, easier, or more economical of time and money.

And, as for the work, the Electric Iron gets better results, because it operates in a more natural and therefore, more scientific manner. The heat is concentrated in the point, just where it is needed; there is no hard rubbing or scorching. The iron glides in and around tucks and flounces as smoothly as over flat surfaces.

A big family ironing can be done in half the time, and at a trifling cost of, say, 5c. Irons are sold at $4.50 and $5.50, on terms that make it easy tor you to own one.

Our special trial offer enables you to make a fair test of the Electric Iron without care or obligation. Ask about it.
