e. a supplante ed death in defence of their truth—we can scarcely imaheirship from the possibility of a more perfect or more abundant beneficial capacity. It now rests with the Deists, if they would vindicate in the Lord, and deduce some matters of fact of former ages, which they also of the Lord, ow to be true, possessing evidence superior or even and Acts it. 2 millar to those of Christ. This however, it must at the to sit (Isai, it ame time be observed, would be far from proving the natters of fact of Christ to be false; but certainly, with thetical capacity this, they cannot reasonably assert that their own facts nament of the lone, so much more unfavorably circumstanced with retaxis. 40.)

facts of Christon Let them therefore produce their Cæsar, or their Mafor either the somet.

false, without senses of man an judge;

an judge;

The produce their Cæsar, or their Mafor either the somet.

(I.) Performing a fact, of which men's outward senses an judge;

The produce their Cæsar, or their Mafor either the senses of mitnesses.

(II.) Publicly in the presence of witnesses;

eye-witnesses (III.) In memory of which public monuments and actions e or might havere kept up.

any that were (IV.) Instituted and commencing at the time of the fact: cumstance, in (V.) Recorded likewise in a set of books, addressed to eal. And they he identical people before whom it was performed, and given sight to (VI.) As the work of one previously announced for five thousand hat very period by a long train of prophecies. shes;" or have (VII.) And still more peculiarly pre-figured by types, ed." from his characteristic and personal nature, from the ear. ed," from his both of a circumstantial and personal nature, from the ear.

of the Jewis iest ages; and, lastly, (VIII.) Of such a character, as made it impossible for whom its firs either the relators or hearers to believe it, if false, without of those facts supposing an universal deception of the senses of mankind: te disciple, un. Again—Let them display in its relators, themselves too ward (not ever eye-witnesses of the fact, the same proofs of veracity evingever pretend ed by an equally-patient endurance of certain distress and ingenuity in death in its support; and in some doctrine founded upon ave been able it [as unpopular in its outset, and in its progress as little st three centural aided by arms, or learning, or cratory, or intrigue] the rument strong same triumph over the united prejudices and passions of rori_inal relamankind: