APOSTLES RESTED UNDER TREE STILL STANDING. On the little island of Kos, off the coast of Asia Minor, is one of the most famous trees in the world. Kos is a tiny island belonging to the Turks and the tree in question stands in the main street of the principal town of the same name. Its branches are tradition says that St. Luke and St. Paul rested.

It is a huge tree, eighteen yards in circumference, and more than 2,000 years old. It is surrounded by a raised platform, breast high, which has been built to support the trunk of the tree after it had become hollow and weak from decay.

The lower branches are still flourishing, and have been supported by pieces of wood, or over the upper canopy, of which the branches have grown like caps, in consequence of the pressure of close by the tree is a solid marble seat, which is believed to have been the chair of the famous Greek doctor, Hippocrates, the "father of medicine." He taught his pupils from that seat and as he was born more than 400 years before Christ, it gives some idea of the great age of the tree.

HASTY MARRIAGES BARRED. Little Church Around the Corner Issues a Statement. The Church of the Transfiguration, often referred to as the Little Church Around the Corner, has issued a statement to dispel the impression that the church is a haven for easy marriages. Here is the statement, in part, as given in the Montreal Star.

The Rev. Dr. George C. Houghton, rector of the parish, has always insisted upon the strictest rules for the eligibility of applicants for marriage. For instance, Dr. Houghton has always refused to marry two parties, either of whom had been divorced or who had not been baptized, or had not their parents' or guardians' consent, even where both parties were of full age.

Despite the rector's strictness, the American public has associated runaway marriages with the Little Church Around the Corner, and for many years this belief survived. As a matter of fact, the church has been the case except in three or four instances, where the parties made false sworn statements. In no case was more than at chief New York churches.

Dr. Houghton was out of town taking a rest, but at the office of the church it was stated that the announcement probably was given out by some one appointed by the rector to issue statements for the church. "No doubt," said the secretary of the church, "the announcement from sight-seeing buses have prompted Dr. Houghton to issue the statement."

Signing of Armistice Did Not End The Hunt

Two More In New York

Latest Indications Against Men Said to Have Aided the Notorious Captain Boehm, Now Under Sentence of Death in London

Signing of the armistice on November 11 did not end the hunt for spies in the Allied countries, as we are reminded by a report of the indictment of two men in New York on Saturday on a charge of aiding Captain Hans W. Boehm, one of the most notorious of German spies.

Boehm is under sentence of death in London for his part in the capture of the Tower of London, as he has been since the summer of 1918, and it is said that the reason for delaying the execution is a desire to hunt down all the chief spy's associates. The men indicted in New York are Carl T. Thomas and Max Winer. It seems likely that others will be indicted, among them a woman named Bussem, who appears to have been one of the chief conspirators in furnishing Boehm with passports.

Armed with forged credentials he made two or three visits to Germany in 1918, and it is said that before sailing on each occasion he had an interview with Count Bernstorff. He is also said to have received $85,000 from Captain von Papen, who was dispatched in a famous labor troubles at factories making munitions for the Allies. In Germany he made reports to von Jagow. All his activities and the activities of his confederates took place at a time when the United States was a neutral.

Spy Comes Before War. Capt. Boehm, of the German army, was specially selected for espionage in the United States, landed on August 1, 1914, a circumstance that adds to the overwhelming weight of evidence which proves that Germany took it for granted that Great Britain would enter the war.

Some weeks ago it seemed likely that the market would be swamped with second-hand machine tools, taken from the war shops of the country. The dealers of United States have been in the market for some time, but the prices of these tools are not being sustained, because much of this material is being absorbed by the trade, and other large quantities of it are being sent to the scrap heap. It is quite within sight that this material shall be accounted for inside of the next few months. In some ways the presence of this machinery on the market provides a way out for the man who cannot or will not go in and pay the present prices for a new machine tool. Although the war is over, prices for new machine tools will still be high, and the man who has a second-hand machine tool at a low price is a very lucky man. Dealers do not seem inclined to think that the high prices for holding back sales as they state they are doing a very fair volume of business.

Several firms are at the point where they have concluded their present business and are looking for new customers. It is quite reasonable to suppose that there is a market for the material, and that many of the firms who are holding back sales as they state they are doing a very fair volume of business.

Canadian interests are watching the movement in the steel-producing centers of the United States with great interest. It is getting to be one of the chief pastimes. There have been rumors on the street of a deal being made between the Canadian government and the United States for a contract for delivery to this country, but it has not been possible to locate the man who is to make the deal. There are a couple of big plate jobs being hung up because those interested will not pay the current high prices. Canadian dealers look for a decrease around the first of April, while Pittsburgh market is holding back sales as they state they are doing a very fair volume of business.

The scrap market is stagnant. There is no demand for scrap. Dealers state that they are losing money on the present volume of business with a practically fixed overhead. Some of the dealers are so far as to state that they are out of the market entirely for the present so far as buying goes, and there is a feeling that the market will scrape lower yet before the actual bottom of the market is touched.

THE WOMAN INTERVIEWS. Boehm's confederates in the United States, so far as is known, were Carl Thomas and Max A. Wyner, the former being employed on the staff of a German-American newspaper, presumably one of Hearst's string. In the fall of 1915 the former introduced Boehm to St. John, a German by birth, who had been recently divorced from an American citizenship. This woman, by the way, is now in custody at Ellis Island. At that time she was living in considerable style at a New York apartment house and soon after the introduction of Boehm, under the name of Mrs. George Smylie, to the city. Whether she took up her residence in the apartment is not known. It is now contended that Mrs. Thrasher received Boehm into her home for the purpose of establishing his American citizenship. She wrote to officials in Georgia to learn the place and date of her husband's birth, the pair not having been married long enough to get a divorce. The next day she was in the hands of the American government and is likely to make things awkward for the British.

The object of the letters was to secure data which would aid Boehm in the preparation of her former husband's name. Accompanying this fact was an affidavit from Wyner to the effect that he had known Boehm or Thrasher for ten years and knew that she was an American citizen. Whether Wyner made this false affidavit out of love of the fatherland or for a sum of cash in hand is not clear. He will presently have the privilege of explaining. At any rate the passport was issued and Boehm, under the name of Thrasher, set sail as previously mentioned, only to be taken off the boat at Palm Beach. He was most indignant at his arrest and demanded that the British government should communicate immediately with his wife in New York or with officials who were among the thousands rounded up.

Now it appears that Mr. Thrasher had worn glasses from boyhood, having an incurable astigmatism. This fact was established by the British Secret Service, which also established the fact that the glasses worn by the prisoner were of a different character and made only for occasional use. Thrasher would have been blinded by Boehm's glasses, and Boehm would have been blinded by Thrasher's glasses, an incident, by the way, which seems to have been overlooked by our authors of murder mysteries. Apart from this error, Boehm had no saving graces. They were also requested to assist in sorting spagnum moss, and to aid in all charitable work coming under their observation.
