

A WOMAN'S VIEW OF THE BONUS

(B. D. C. in the Review.)

The doughboy had no monopoly of hardships. Not only did millions who stayed at home during the war suffer from the increased cost of living, as you say, but an incalculable number rendered services and incurred dangers quite equal to those of drafted soldiers. Let me give two examples out of a multitude which might be cited.

I myself thought the war (not merely after the tardy entrance of the United States), and while engaged in the fairly arduous task of earning a modest living, spent literally all of my leisure and strength and a good deal of money in a monotonous and very obscure form of war work for which I never have received and never shall receive any other reward than that of knowing that I did my bit to win the war. Shortly before the armistice my doctor told me that if I did not end this drain on my strength, which was resulting in serious illness, I should die, and die soon. I have not yet recovered from those terrible years; perhaps I never shall. I am not aware that there in any movement on foot to give me a bonus or "adjuster pay."

Soon after the United States declared war a friend of mine, a woman of 25, gave up the interesting and congenial occupation by which she was earning her living and from a sense of patriotic duty went to do very delicate and dangerous work in a smokeless powder factory, where, as she well knew, any minute might bring death. Her wages were $10 a week, enough to feed and lodge her, but not to cover all her expenses. The last time I saw her, some months after the end of the war, she was looking for a job. I know of no plan to give her a bonus or "adjuster pay."

The American soldiers were incomparably the best paid in Europe (their pay was twenty times that of their French comrades) they were excellently fed, clothed, and cared for; they had the very enviable opportunity of foreign travel and of observing one of the supreme crises of human history at close range, and when one contemplates the picture of Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., Red Cross, and Salvation Army vying with each other to tempt the doughboy's palate with home-made delicacies and to rescue him from ennui with concerts and the movies, and then turns to look at other armies, for example, at the Serbians during the appalling retreat to Albania, an American begins to feel a little ashamed. No American soldier had to suffer, as did French, Belgians, Serbians, and Rumanians, the moral anguish of leaving his family and property a prey to enemy invasion; no American troops fought for as much as the fighting line at all. It was the potential, not the actual, exploits of the American army which turned the scale of victory.

Those soldiers who have come back to us crippled or mutilated richly deserve adequate pensions and the best of "reconstruction" work, but if the country is going to give a bonus for losses and suffering caused by war service, let all who lost and suffered be rewarded—which brings us to the reductio ad absurdum.

TENANTS BUY HEAVY IN PROTEST OF HIGH RENTS.

New York, May 15.—Tenants have purchased more than $75,000,000 worth of apartments and business structures in New York in the last year under the co-operative ownership plan, as a protest against high rents it was learned on Thursday.

Proponents of the movement claim that substantial savings have been or will be made on their rent outlay from the profits and economies resulting from their own landlordship.

The first office building to be erected here on the co-operative scheme, under plans announced on Thursday, will involve an outlay of $40,000,000—the largest single real estate transaction in the history of the city. The buildings will be 31 and 25 stories in height and will have a floor area of 1,500,000 square feet. The skyscrapers will be erected on property northwest of the Grand Central terminal between Park and Madison avenues.

"SWEET Me-moi-ies," thought the lady of the house, in a pleasantly whimsical mood, as a birthday reminder of Moir's Chocolates came from his office just after the lunch hour.

The times that Moir's had come in "courting days" were sweet memories to her in more than one way. Always fresh, delicious and rich, the heavy coatings made Moir's Chocolates the favorites for all time.
