Cows Losing Their Milk.

What is an unfortunate failing, for in the respects the cows are often good, many of them lose milk only when the milk is full, in which case it is worth while to milk them three times a day, at four A. M., noon and eight P. M. It will relieve the udder so that they will hold their milk very well afterwards, and the milk runs down, and then it is easy to get rid of such an animal, as there is no cure. I have a man working on a farm who labored on the Duke of Buckingham's estate in England, and he has several cows that lose their milk as a consequence of being milked with a machine made for the purpose. It is generally best to get rid of animals giving extra trouble, etc., as there may be ways to lessen the quantity running away, but it is never worth while to bother with such instances, as it is easy to replace her. Suppose, however, that this Durham cow is a true-bred short horn, and it is wished to use all the calves she will produce, the way will be to let the calf run with her every time, and then the milk will be sucked so often as to prevent any loss of consequence, or if there should be then why, of course, there is possibly no choice but to get rid of her or her calves otherwise. It is not only, however, that the milk drops fast as it comes into the udder, for if there would be no means of drying except by physic, bleeding or half-living. When advice is asked it would well to give more particulars, for then it is said the cow loses her milk, it might be meant she sinks or gives less milk, and thus loses by drying up; in which case if good succulent food won't set a steady flow, nothing will.—*Cor. Save Manure from all Sources.

At a meeting of the American Institute of Farm Lovers, Dr. A. S. Heath gave a paper, especially important to farmers, on the relation to husbandry of manure of every description and from every possible source. They were recommended to gather the weeds cut down and left to rot by the roadside or along the fences, poultry grass in the swales, fine chips of sawdust accumulated about the mill, leaves lying by the carted in the roads, rich mud along the stables and barns, contaminating the atmosphere and rendering the place unhealthy for stock. A keen eye will discover much rubbish that will make a valuable compost pile. All these substances, except bones, should be deposited upon the ing-pile.

The Farmer is proverbially economical.

Most matters, yet in reference to saving manure he is generally the most wasteful of all mankind. More farmers, the doctor said, have been impoverished by neglecting to keep up the manure supply for their deteriorating soils than from most any other cause. A successful farmer sows not only the manure already enumerated, but refuse of all kinds, such as old shoes and stumps, shavings, and carcasses of dead animals, in a word, everything that will assist to increase the number of bushels of grain and potatoes, or add fodder and fuel to the barn.

A Great Farmer's Maxim.

The successful life of Mr. Jacob Vreeland, the prince of American farmers, can be attributed to the close observation of the following maxims, originated by himself:

Make your fences high and strong so they will keep cattle and pigs out. If you have brush make your lots strong and secure and keep the hogs from the corn.

Be sure to get hands to bed by seven o'clock; they will rise early by force of circumstances.

Pay a hand, if he is a poor hand, all you promise him; if he is a good one pay him a little more; it will encourage him to do still better.

Always feed your hands as well as you feed yourselves, for the laboring men are bone and sinew of the land and ought to be well treated.

I am satisfied that getting up early, industry and regular habits, are the best medicine prescribed for health.

When rainy, bad weather comes so you can't work out of doors, cut, split and pile your wood, make your racks, fix your fences or gate, and patch the roof of your barn or house.

Study your own interest closely and do not spend your time in electing Presidents, Governors and other smaller officers, or talk of hard times, and spend your time in whittling store boxes.

The Difference.

There is a vast difference in the conduct of a man and woman in new clothes. When a woman gets a new suit, she immediately prances down town, and for hours will walk contentedly along a crowded thoroughfare, receiving fresh impulses of joy every time another woman scans her wardrobe. But a man is so different! He won't put on his new clothes for the first time until it is dark; then he goes down town so cautiously as to almost create the impression that he is sneaking along. If he sees a crowd on the corner, he will slip across the way to avoid them; and when he goes into his grocery, he tries to get behind as many barrels and boxes as he can. All the time he is trying his level best to appear as if the suit was six months old, and all the while realizes that he is making a great failure of it.

Conflict Between Man and Deer.

A few days since, says the Rock Island (Ill.) Union, Mr. Coyne rode over to Mr. Cronch's corn-field to salt some cattle which he has there on hire while the stalk feed lasted. After sitting and looking over the herd he was wending his way homeward on an easy canter, when his horse started suddenly, looked forward earnestly and stopped. Mr. Coyne had not much eyesight left, but he thought he saw something, and sliding off his horse he hitched it to a corn-hill and taking a look of scrutiny he saw a large deer standing with its hind feet on a bridge and its forward part down in the stream apparently trying to break through the ice in search of drink. Mr. Coyne's blood was up immediately. He approached the deer from behind with the ambulating gate peculiar to a man with a single eye, stiff arms, lame limbs, broken ribs and rheumatic stiffness. The deer kept busy and so did Billy, so that just as the last swallow was taken, Billy's last step had been taken, and almost flat on the ground he seized the deer, one limb in each hand, just above the pastern joints. That moment the creature gave a frightened bleat and a tremendous bound. Billy says they went floating through the air for a distance of perhaps two rods, and came down together in the middle of the quagmire. After that he says things were a little mixed. The deer got one foot loose on Billy's lame side, and kicked him black and blue, every place but in his "left eye." That was mercifully preserved, but he got another hold after he had been dragged some distance, and regaining his feet he raised the hinder parts of the struggling animal from the ground, gave it a side twist, and managed to give such a kick with his boot as to stun it, and seizing it around the neck he gathered a convenient stone and knocked it on the head. After taking some satisfaction in this he mounted his horse, rode to Mr. Cronch's, got a butcher knife, rode back and found the deer half way on its feet again. He dispatched it, rode home and sent his boys after the carcass with a wagon, remarking that he was a "leetle to stiff" to go himself.

Swiss Bridges.

Every traveler in Switzerland is struck with the peculiarity of their bridges, which are mostly roofed in the same fashion as their chalets, the use of which practice is not manifest at first, but is doubtless for the purpose of protecting them from snow, which would otherwise block up their transit. There are several very curious specimens of these roofed bridges in the antiquated city of Lucerne. They are also thrown across the river Reuss, which, although it enters the lake of Alborno, a turbid, puddled stream, resembling milk, having passed through the lake, issues a beautiful azure blue. I could stand by the hour to look upon it. On panels, which are fastened to the timbers supporting one of the bridges, you have delineated the "Dance of Death," after Holbein's famous picture at Basel. On the side of another, which runs in a slanting direction across the mouth of the Reuss, there are upwards of seventy pictures, which describe the feats of the patron saints of Lucerne, while on the opposite side there are the same number, describing, historically, various scenes in Swiss history.

Swiss Colonies in the South.

A Swiss colony settled on Cumberland mountain, Tenn., in 1873. This colony, which consists of one hundred and fifteen families, making a company of about seven hundred people, purchased ten thousand acres of mountain land at one dollar per acre, and now, although only four years have elapsed, each head of a family has a comfortable home, surrounded by an orchard and garden and decorated with the produce of mountain flowers. There is a large store that is managed for the colony, members of which get goods at wholesale cost; the colony has its school, church, doctors, etc., and the members their own candidates to govern the districts in which they live. The colonists already have dairies and cheese factories in successful operation, and all their products find ready sale and command fancy prices. They have splendid herds of cattle, and their barns are built as carefully as their houses. There is also a colony of Swiss near Greenville, S. C., about as large as the Tennessee colony, and it is prospering finely.

How Fish Hooks Travel.

In the scientific department of a recent number of Harper's Weekly was a recital of the curious fact that fish hooks of a French pattern, in use by the inhabitants along the Newfoundland coast, had been found in codfish caught along the New England shores, a distance of 2,000 miles. But Milwaukee is able to go a thousand miles better. J. Tyrrell, a messenger in the United States court, recently purchased a codfish in this city, in which was found one of the hooks referred to. The hook had been in circulation among the dealers in this city, but nothing has been found that resembles it at all. Dr. Foster, of the United States court, was also unable to find a similar one in a collection of several thousand. It is evident that the hook has made a journey of upwards of 3,000 miles.—Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel.

The fashionable bracelet in Paris is the 'eagle'—slavery.

It is a fetter of gold worn on the arm above the elbow, and is riveted and soldered by the jeweler in the presence of the donor, to or in the presence of the donor, to be worn till death, or divorce, or separation. The jeweler, when the operation is over, bids the lady call next day to see that the rivet holds firmly. She comes—without her friend, the donor—and the treasurer, the goldsmith, confides to her the secret of a concealed spring, by means of which she can remove the fetter at will.

Myths are but Symbols of Truth. As the scholar sees in the vain but beautiful mythologies of the ancients the embodied expression of the hungry human soul, blindly groping after the infinite, so the physician sees in that popular myth of the sixteenth century the faintest perception of health and youth. An expression of the longings of suffering humanity for a remedy that should forever prevent the recurrence of disease. The fable of Europe were rescued for this wonderful fountain, and Ponce de Leon sought for it in the cyrene swamps and tangled everglades of the Florida peninsula. Health and youth. When this source is corrupted, the painful and sorrow-producing effects are visible in many shapes. The manifestations of which it manifests itself in the human body. But as all the various forms of disease which depend upon bad blood are cured or best treated by such medicines as take up from this fluid and excrete from the system the noxious elements, it is not practical to point out a single remedy. For instance, medical authors describe about fifty varieties of skin disease, but as they all require for their cure very similar treatment, it is of no practical utility to know just what name to apply to a certain form of skin disease, so you know how best to cure it. They again, I might go on and describe various kinds of scrofulous sores, fever sores, white swellings, enlarged glands, and the various eruptions, might describe how virulent poison may show itself in various forms of eruptions, ulcers, sore throat, boils, etc.; but as all these various appearances involving constitutional weakness or physical decay, I deem such a course unnecessary. Thoroughly clear the blood, which is the great fountain of life, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will all return to you. For this purpose Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets are pre-eminently the articles needed. They are warranted to cure tetter, scald-head, head-ache, rheumatism, neuralgia, and all the various eruptions, pimples, blotches, spots, eruptions, pustules, boils, carbuncles, sore eyes, rough skin, itching, scrofulous sores, and swellings, fever sores, white swellings, tumors, old sores or swellings, affections of the skin, throat, and bowels, and all the various eruptions, pimples, blotches,
