THE HOME.

WHO PLANTS A TREE.

He who plants a tree
Plants a hope.
Rootlet up through fibers blindly grope
Leaves unfold into horizons free.
So man's life must climb
From the clods of time
Unto heavens sublime
Canst thou prophesy, thou little tree,
What the glory of the boughs shall be?

He who plants a tree
Plants a joy.
Plants a comfort that will never ogle;
Every day a fresh reality,
Beautiful and strong,
To whose shelter throng
Creatures blithe with song.
If thou couldst but know, thou happy tree,
Of the bliss that shall inhabit thee!

He who plants a tree—
He plants a peace—
Under its green curtain jargons cease.
Leaf and asphyr murmur soothingly;
Shadows soft with sleep
Down their crevices creep,
Balm of slumber deep.
Never hast thou dreamed, thou blessed tree,
Of the benedictions thou shalt be.

He who plants a tree—
He plants youth!
Vigor won for centuries, in sooth;
Life of time, that blinks eternally;
Boughs their strength uprear,
New shoots every year
On the old growths appear.
Thou shalt teach the aged, sturdy tree,
Youth of soul is immortality.

He who plants a tree—
He plants love.
Tents of coolness spreading out above
Wayfarers, he may not live to see.
Gifts that grow are best;
Hands that bless are blest.
Plant! Life does the rest.
Heaven and earth help him who plants
A tree,
And his work its own reward shall be.

REAL NEIGHBORS.

BY S. S. BLOVER.

It was a bright morning early in March, when a pretty bluebird came flying across farmer Armstrong's lawn, and alighted on a little wooden box which had been fastened up as a bird-house and nailed on the top of a post.

"A very nice place for our summer house," chirped Mr. Bluebird, as he surveyed it critically.

He then flew to a cherry tree, took with not only ripe fruit every morning for breakfast, but tender, fat bugs which will be after the sweets.

With a survey of the neighborhood and a few moments of approved conversation, Mr. Bluebird flew away to talk it all over with Mrs. Bluebird.

The next morning was cold, and for several days it really seemed as if one must be in December instead of in a month past due in the almanac as belonging to spring; but just as soon as the sun stood where he could really look squarely on the earth things took a turn, and on the first sunny day Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird arrived, and once began to put the new house in order. They were neat weavers, and each year made a better nest than the last. They brought grass and hair, and were getting on famously when they heard an indignant chirping close beside them.

It was Jenny Wren. Had not this been her home for several summers past? She knew every corner of the farm, and knew every bird and insect among her friends. For the past month she had been looking forward to returning to this delightful country home. It was too bad to be disappointed! She could not hide her feelings, but as pleasantly as possible (for she was naturally a cheerful creature) stated the whole case.

Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird held a solemn council, agreeing to look if there were any other vacant house, and if one could be found to vacate that afternoon. At last beside the brook a swinging tree-bough was discovered with the coolest hollow for her nest.

"Ever so much rounder and nicer than that square box," chirped Mrs. Bluebird, happy, helpful wife that she was, always looking on the bright side.

"Yes," answered her mate, "you and I believe will find more delicious beetles, worms and spiders in this shady, quiet spot."

So they politely left the home first chosen. Mrs. Wren sang a merry song of thanks, and quickly set to work to build her nest. Of course she used the material brought by Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird! No indeed! Every scrap was thrown out and Jenny proceeded to build her house according to her own plan. Dead leaves were brought, some of them as big as herself, soft moss, too, and feathers for the downy lining. Mrs. Wren helped, and they were soon again happy in the summer home.

And Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird never regretted that they had been polite and given up their first place? No, the other they liked better, and sang the merrier because they had loved their neighbors just as well as themselves.

THE TALKING DOG.

There was once a ventriloquist so poor that he was obliged to travel on foot from town to town to save expense, much after the manner of the gentleman of adventure in Grimm's tales. One day he was joined on the road by a dog as forsaken as himself, but who seemed as desirous of becoming his companion.

They journeyed together to the next town, and entered the tavern there, but the dog, not being trained to the manners of the gentleman of adventure, which comes from a long line of gentle ancestors, the man had developed the quality known as cheek; so he and the dog sat down to eat a supper for which they could not pay.

"The room was full of loungers, and the stranger took a conspicuous seat. 'What will you have?' asked the only waiter the place employed; and the order embraced nearly everything on the bill of fare.

"But I want something for my dog, too," he added. "Ask him what he will have."

The waiter muttered something about "watcher giving us?" so the stranger said, "What, don't you like to? Well, Bruno will you have beef or fish?"

"Beef, every time," said Bruno, looking with mild brown eyes at the waiter.

"And what to drink?"

"Water, thank you," said Bruno. "By this time the landlord and every one in the place were eager with suppressed wonder, and gathered about to hear a dog talk."

The ventriloquist feigned indifference by eating with avidity, while the landlord was evidently considering some reply. His cogitation resulted in his offering the stranger three hundred dollars for his wonderful dog.

The ventriloquist appeared to hesitate a moment, then said abruptly, "Yes, you may have him for three hundred dollars."

When the money was paid and the ventriloquist was about to leave, he turned to the dog, patted him affectionately, and said, "Good-bye, old fellow, you're been a good friend to me."

"You are no friend of mine," returned the dog, "to sell me to another master. As you were mean enough to serve me such a trick, I'll have revenge. I'll never speak another word as long as I live."

The ventriloquist made off with all possible haste.—Harper's Young People.

A PIGNY PEA SOUP.

A recipe for pea soup which has a little different flavor from every day soup, comes from India, where it is customary to use sharp, piquant flavorings. This soup may be recommended as an excellent addition to our home menu.

Put a pint of soaked green peas to soak in a quart of water over night. In the morning drain them and add three pints of cold water and a bit of soda the size of a pea. Boil them very slowly, until they are as soft as butter.

Add six cloves and one bay leaf, and finally add the whole to the peas that have been strained through the sieve. Put in a tablespoonful of salt and a cup of canned tomatoes, or fresh ones in their season. Let the soup simmer for half an hour, when it is too thick for a soup, thin it with a little boiling water, and let it cook ten minutes longer. At this time add a pinch of red pepper, a tablespoonful of butter, and a couple of squares of bread which have been fried golden-brown in butter.

This soup has an additional advantage of being comparatively inexpensive.

ALMOST CHAST.—SUFFERING FROM CONSTIPATION.

Expected to be in the Asylum.—After all other Remedies Failed B.B.B. made a Perfect Cure, Restoring Robust Health.

GENTLEMEN.—To say all I ought to in favor of B.B.B. would be impossible. It has been a great help to me, and I do swear by it. I am a different man now to what I was ten years ago when it was expected I would be in the asylum, but now I am in perfect health and it was the B.B.B. that did it. I suffered for five or six years from constipation, sometimes so severely that I went out of my mind. I tried various doctors, both in the country and in the city, and took medicines too numerous to name, but everything failed to have the desired effect. When I used Burdock Blood Bitters, however, it succeeded beyond all expectations, requiring only two bottles to cure me. To make it still more certain that B.B.B. is the real cure for Constipation, I may say that some two years afterward I felt the symptoms returning and took one bottle more, and from that time to this present day (over eight years) I have never had any return of the disease. I never knew any medicine to work so well. It does not seem to be a mere reliever but a sure and certain cure, as I can testify to, for hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine and advice failed to do me any good, but three dollars' worth of B.B.B. made a permanent cure that has given me years of health and comfort.

Yours truly,
C. L. KILMER.

Carpet-Sweeping.—After a velvet or other heavy pile carpet is thoroughly swept, a sponging with ammonia and water will preserve its brightness wonderfully. About once a month, after sweeping, take a pailful of warm water, after adding thereto a tablespoonful of ammonia or turpentine. Two spoonfuls of the latter will do good, it being a preventive against moths. Go over the whole carpet with a large soft cloth or sponge wrung so as not to drip. Doubtless you will be surprised at the rapid discoloration of the water. If the carpet be large and much soiled or dusty, the water should be changed once or twice.

THE FARM.

GARDENING FOR PLEASURE, PROFIT AND HEALTH.

Almost every farmer has some kind of a garden. Few have such a garden as they might. Some people haven't a good place for a garden. The soil near the house is too wet or too rocky. It is best to grow some garden crops in the field. There they can be cultivated with the horse. Weeds are the terror of the farm garden, and if they can be killed by horse power it is a great saving. So sweet corn, all beans, squashes, early potatoes and the like should be grown where the cultivator can be used among them, but not too far from the house.

There is a real pleasure in getting the ground ready, putting in seeds and watching them grow. There is pleasure in having fine vegetables to eat and sell. All the family should share in this pleasure. The wife and mother, the one who has the indoor work to do, should have the garden. There is pleasure in the growing plants. She should get out among them every fair day; she should learn to love the garden. A part of it may grow flowering plants, and no farmer should grow the last for this. Where there are children the garden should be a place of pleasure and of getting knowledge. In fighting weeds they learn a lesson as to what must be done to gain success in any field in life.

The profit of the garden is twofold—the profit of selling and the profit of using for food. As to the latter, a farmer's table may be supplied with fresh vegetables from his garden every day during the season. The farmer knows how much food may be grown upon an acre, or a tenth or sixteenth of an acre, when it is devoted to garden vegetables. Suppose a family were to eat away from home, and the garden would take care of them. How much land would it take to keep one man or woman or child in food? If you had plenty of manure, on how large a piece of ground could you grow your own food?

Pleasure, profit and health come together on the table in the farmhouse when well-grown and nicely prepared vegetables and garden fruits are placed upon it. The husband's skill in growing and the wife's skill in cooking are here combined for the welfare of the home. Many a home might be made happier by a good garden. While bread, pork and potatoes as a regular hot weather ration do not tend to health or happiness. But what pleasure the family takes in watching the growing of the early radishes and peas and vegetables and garden fruits are placed upon it.
