THE "LIBEL" A TION.

The Planet need scarcely say that it received with sincere satisfaction the verdict of the jury at the High Court yesterday completely vindicating this journal in the course it pursued in reporting in the public interests certain matters appertaining to the recent Regimental Band embroglio in a full, fearless and accurate manner, which it did in good faith, and solely in its desire to acquaint the public with the true facts concerning the same.

/ Such an emphatic, unanimous and prompt endorsation from a jury of his peers is thoroughly appreciated by the publisher of this journal. It is an incentive and encouragement to straight-forward and honorable journalism in dealing with public events in the public interests. It will be, moreover, appreciated by the whole Canadian press. It testifies eloquently to the fact that Canadian juries are going to administer Canadian justice fully and unfalteringly -and that, in so far as the Canadian press conducts itself worthily and honestly in the public interests, it is to be firmly fortified and protect ed from the miscellaneous and annov ing attacks, which, perhaps, must occasionally result at the hands of in dividuals to whom this straight-forward course may prove distasteful, or in whom it may engender bitter personal animosity.

And in so saying The Planet has no reference to Mr. Philp, the plaintiff in yesterday's action against this journal. The Planet has no feeling of antagonism or improper motive towards Mr. Philp-never had. I has always sought to treat him fair. ly and generously-and will continue to do so. It only regrets that he permitted himself to get into the unfortunate position in which he found himself at the conclusion of the trial.

To The Planet the verdict of the jury will be an inspiration to increased loyalty and devotion to the interests of the public at large and the constituency it serves. The newspaper should have no interests of its own antagonistic to its public function-it should have no secret consideration for advocating the cause of individuals under pretense of serving the public good. It must ever remember it is in a confidential relation with the people it serves, and it owes to them all that relation

The importance of absolute sin cerity, truthfulness and impartiality in presenting and discussing public questions will be appreciated when the tremendous influence of the press is considered. People look to the press for information upon all current affairs, and their actions are governed, more or less, by what they learn from this source. That these actions may be intelligent and effec tive, the information must be correct and the discussion fair and honest. Otherwise the people are lulled into a false security in their dearest concerns or are wrongly led to their injury in their most important affairs.

A newspaper-as The Planet takes it-voluntarily assuming these obligations and receiving support upon that assumption has no moral right to falsify or suppress the truth, or explicitly or by indirection mislead the public concerning any public

It cannot ignore any such matter as not being its business, because this is what the nature of its function obliges it to know-at the peril of failing in the very cause and excuse for its being at all. Not to know is to be delinquent-and, knowing, to be silent, is to be derelict

And, above all, the fact should never be overlooked that the newspaper man is in confidential relation with the public and therefore he should never compromise that relation by advocating the cause of single individuals who endeavor to make use of him for their own gain. He should never compromise his better judgment by neglecting his full duty to the public.

This is, at least, the view that The Planet holds and the conviction upon which it proposes to act. It may be that it must result in vindictive animosity on the part of those against whom it militates. If so, we regret it-but it does not make our duty the less plain and imperative. And we have confidence in the support and endorsation of the people themselves, whose interests it is our aim to safeguard and conserve.

The Planet sincerely appreciates the splendid verdict of vindication awarded by the jury yesterday. It will seek to prove itself-in the future as in the past-worthy of the public confidence it enjoys, and its actions will be guided solely by its devotion to the public weal and the public right.

In concluding, The Planet desires to further express its appreciation of many kind friends who generously gave their time and assistance to this journal in the action which concluded yesterday. To Mr. O. L. Lewis it is particularly indebted From the outset Mr. Lewis has had complete charge of The Planet's case, and the thorough, effectual and successful manner in which the preparation of it was conducted-calling for the complimentary comment of his lordship at the close-is a high tribute to Mr. Lewis' forensic and well-known ability. To Mr. W. R. Riddell, K. C., of Toronto, who so capably performed the important functions of counsel, and to Lieut, Colonel J. B. Rankin, Major G. P. Scholfield, Capt. Fred. Stone, Crown Attorney H. D. Smith, Messrs. W. A. Coltart, F. D. Laurie, G. W. Cornell, Geo. Embrey and many other citizens who, at inconvenience to themselves, placed their services at our disposal, the thanks of The Planet are very heartily tendered.

CRISIS IN FAR EAST.

BRITAIN MAY BE INVOLVED IN CASE OF WAR.

All Reports Indicate that a Crisis is at Hand-Reinforcements For Russian Fleets

London, Oct. 13.-It was announced at the Foreign Office relative to the situation in the far east, that the powers having treaty rights with China will require such rights to o maintained unimpaired, whatever are rangement Russia makes with China If these rights are respected the British officials consider it improbable that either Japan or any other power will do anything which may threaten peace in the far east. In spite of the reassuring statements of the Foreign Office and Baron Hayaski, the frequent itera tion that hostilities between Russia and Japan are imminent, the mysterious movements of the Russian and Japan ese fleets, and the excited state of pub lic opinion in Japan are beginning to cause disquiet in Great Britain. Only the most sanguine persons believe that in the event of hostilities they could be kept within the limits which would free Great Britain from her obliga-

on to support her Japanese ally.

Baron Hayashi, the Japanese repreentative to Britain, is not so optimisc.

Indirectly he admits the tic. Indirectly he admits the possibility of war by expressing the hope that in the event of a crisis Japan will have the active sympathy of Great Britain. Baron Hayashi admittant the dislocation of the sympathy of the sym changed since October 8. He, how ever, had heard nothing from his Gov

Sympathetic Brigands.

Sympathetic Brigands.

Modern banditti retain in Epirus all the audacity, with some of the picturesqueness, of the old time brigand. A somewhat striking instance is recorded from the town of Konitza. A bridegroom, with his family and man friends, was proceeding with violins, files and other musical instruments, according to the custom of the country, to bring the bride, when, half way, they found themselves beset on all sides by seventeen armed brigands, who, at the gun's muzzle, compelled the surrender of every farthing in money and every article of jewelry they possessed—even to the nuptial ring. The coup being quite successful and the booty large as the family was well to do and there were many handsome wedding gifts and personal jewels, the brigands entered into the spirit of the occasion, returning the nuptial ring and coins equivalent to 20 pence per head in order that the bridegroom's friends might not cut a too humiliating figure at the nuptial merrymakings. Then, with many good wishes for the future happiness of the bridal pair, the robbers departed.

Depend on no man, on no friend but he who can depend upon himself. He only who acts conscientiously towards himself will act so towards others.

All the gossip periodicals are full of anecdotes about the late Cardinal Vaughan. One of the best is in Household Words, and it tells how as Father Vaughan the late prelate visited an American war vessel, where the captain thought that the chap-lain was a Baptist, though there was some doubt on the point. "Then do you attend his religious services?" inquired the future archbishop. "Guess I do, father," was the reply. And yet I venture to think that the extraordinary vigor and activity which are now the be-seen in every movement of Sir Mich-ael Hicks-Beach has come as a sur-prise even to those who know him well. He stalks up the floor of the House of Commons, great, ominous, menacing, with an ugly glitter in his strong eyes, and with a figure of a slightness and alertness that might slightness and alertness that might bring the blush of envy te even some of the athletic Adonises who are to be found on the benches below the gangway on the Ministerial side of the House. It is but a few months since Sir Michael Hicks-Beach was Chancellor of the Exchequer, and then what a different figure he was from the man of to-day! He seldom were appeared in the House at all. from the man of to-day! He seldem even appeared in the Houss at all. Now and then he gave a peep into the Chamber, but apparently the result was so unsatisfactory that he hastened out of the place again. In. What has produced the change? The answer is simple. It is a proof of the eternal youth of ambition. When all other passions have died from the breasts of men, that passion seems to burn with all the flame of youth. And when the mement comes, when ambition sees before it new horizons, then the flame breaks forth into a big blaze, and the man is young again. I have been told by those who know him that Mr. Chamberlain has shown the same recrudescence of his youth since he entered upon the great struggle in the centre of which he is now mov-ing. To ape anything is a sign of vacuity of mind; to ape the follies of those ove you is one of the most offensive forms of vulgarity. Yet we see the fol-lies of the uppermost classes steadily imitated all down the different sets of society, and the popularity of every book dealing with the peerage is a proof, if one were needed, of what ah sorbing interest our failings are to the public. There is nothing we will not write upon to gratify this vulgar curi osity; nothing is in too bad taste if by its publication we can raise a little of the "needful."
