FIVE-MINUTES' SERMON.

Seventeenth Sunday after Pentecost, CHARITY.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Matt. 22, 37)

To love God with thy whole heart and thy whole soul and thy whole mind, to love Him above all things is the greatest and first commandment of religion; it is the whole substance which the gospel demands of us in order to secure life everlasting.

To show us the great importance of Christian charity, our Lord declares it to be the mark by which His disciples are known: "By this shall all men know that you are My disciples, if you love one another." (John 13, 35)

Do you read what people say about Hood's Sarsaparilla? It is curing all forms of disease caused or promoted by impure blood. Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease.

PROTESTANT CONTROVERSY.

BY A PROTESTANT MINISTER. CIV.

Dean Hodges, after having, as we have seen, given a fantastic and utterly unrecognizable definition of justification by faith, slightly mitigated from Frode, a description in which we find no resemblance to Paul, to Rome, or to Luther himself, and after having described to us as a hero of sincerity and a hater of shams a man who was so little of either that after several years of his new career he threatened, on a sudden disgust, to recant everything he had taught and to go back to the Pope, goes on to speak of indulgences.

The Dean introduces this matter by speaking of Leo X. as "an elegant pagan, who is reported to have said, 'How profitable is the fable of Christ!'"

I have no special criticism to offer upon the Dean's treatment of indulgences. It is slight and superficial, and shows him to have given very little attention to the development of the doctrine and usage, but it is much more incorrect than some of his statements have been concerning matters much nearer the foundation.

IMITATION OF CHRIST.

Works Done Out of Charity.

Evil ought not to be done either for anything in the world, or for the love of any man; but for the profit of one that standeth in need a good work is sometimes freely to be omitted, or rather to be changed for a better.

For by doing thus a good work is not lost, but is changed into a better. Without charity the outward work profits nothing; but whatever done through charity, be it ever so little and contemptible, it all becomes fruitful.

He doth much who loveth much. He doth much who doth well what he doth. He doth well, who regardeth rather the common good than his own will.

That seems often to be charity which is rather natural affection; because our own natural inclination, self-will, hope of retribution, desire of our own interest will seldom be wanting.

He, that hath true and perfect charity, seeketh himself in no one thing, but doth himself the glory of God in all things.

THE FATHER OF GROWN SONS.

It speaks well for both parties when the father of grown sons is respected by them.

Usually a parent shuns the society of his boys when they enter their teens, unwilling to go to the trouble to win their friendship; and more anxious that they should do as he says rather than as he does; and the lad, as they advance towards manhood, think that an essential part of their freedom is to criticize him and hold him in contempt.
