THE PUT-PUT

When first you get your motor,
 You're anxious for to float her,
 So you take her for a spin upon the lake.
 At first she runs quite easy,
 Then, the engine it gets wheezy,
 And you run her in and hitch her to a stake;
 You get out tools and wrenches
 From underneath the benches,
 And get down upon your knees upon the floor,
 You start to twist and turn her,
 You swear you'll surely burn her,
 For the 'bloomin' thing won't put-put any more.

At last you get her started,
 The waves are swiftly parted,
 And you fancy that she never more will buck;
 You really shouldn't crow, sir,
 A mile or two you go, sir,
 When the engine sudden stops and you are stuck;
 The things you start to saying,
 Don't sound to me like praying,
 As you slowly push and paddle back to shore;
 Then you go at your motor,
 And you tell it where to go ter,
 And you think you shouldn't put-put any more.

When everything else is working,
 The pump, you find, is shirking—
 The cylinders, like yourself, are getting hot—
 When the batteries run dry,
 It's for home, sweet home, you sigh,
 And perhaps sometimes you get there—
 —maybe not;

When gasoline starts leaking,
 It's then you do some speaking—
 With put-puts you have troubles by the score;
 Some day you'll go a floating
 On air, instead of boating.
 Then I don't think you'll put-put any more.

DEATH OF LUELLA REDMOND

On Thursday last Carrie Luella Redmond, daughter of the late John and Adelia Redmond, died at her home in Athens, aged 26 years.

She had been ailing for several months, but lately had suffered at times intensely, and viewed with resignation the inevitable termination. An only child, she was the idol of her parents and gave love and obedience in return for the tender care she received. When a little child her father passed away and a few years later her mother was called to the better land, leaving her up-bringing to her aunt, Miss Caroline Lee. This trust was faithfully discharged and Luella developed into a cheerful, pure-minded young woman, beloved by all who knew her. For several years she was employed as a compositor in the Reporter office, where she won the favor of all.

A member of the Methodist church, she was a faithful attendant at all services and a willing worker in all the enterprises of the young people's societies of the church. As an expression of sorrow at her demise and a tribute of respect to her memory, the following floral tokens were sent to the house of mourning:—
 Spray—Epworth League.
 Wreath—S. S. Class.
 Cross—Catechumen Class.
 Spray—Mrs W. Bell.
 Spray—Mr and Mrs R. Cornell.
 Spray (water lilies)—Modelites.

The funeral took place on Saturday, and the pall-bearers were four cousins of deceased from Lyn and Brockville. Service was conducted in the Methodist church by the pastor, Rev F. A. Read, who delivered a most appropriate and comforting discourse on Friendship, as presented in Prov. 18, 24.

A sweet life has ended, a pure, unalloyed spirit has gone to join those who loved it best on earth. To those most near and dear to the departed, the Reporter extends heartfelt condolences.

DR. PYNE OR MR. DONOVAN

Since our last issue all doubt as to model school prospects in Athens have been dissipated. Athens' famous training school is unquestionably a thing of the past.

Immediately following the first announcement that the Athens model school had been wiped out, the chairman of the trustee board communicated with Brockville's representative, who wrote stating that he would at once take the matter up with Dr. Pyne, and later wired that the restoration of Athens Model school was an impossibility.

Mr. A. E. Donovan, M.P.P., arrived in Athens on Saturday and stated that he was greatly surprised at what had occurred. He reiterated his statement that he had, prior to the recent elections, received from Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, such assurances as fully warranted the statements he had made during the campaign in respect to the Athens model school being continued.

After their interview in respect to this school matter Dr. Pyne wrote Mr. Donovan a letter in which he said: "You were quite justified in stating that it [the A.M.S.] might be retained. Of course he was. The educational legislation of this province was then in such a nebulous state that almost anything 'might' be expected. One did not have to obtain an assurance from Dr. Pyne in order to say that. But what Mr. Donovan's political friends and opponents desire and require is a frank acknowledgment from Dr. Pyne that he gave to Mr. Donovan such assurances as warranted him in telling the electors of Brockville riding that the school WOULD be retained. If the Minister of Education is bold enough to be truthful and truthful enough to be bold, we shall expect to receive from him such a clear cut declaration on the subject as shall serve to dispel any doubts that may now exist as to Mr. Donovan's bona fides in the matter. It is not pleasant for a man in public life to have his honor impugned in this way, and the Doctor should hasten to speak the few words necessary."
