

AN EPITAPH.

Here rests a youth who well did love his kind, For in his heart mid' sweetest did dwell, He sought for friendship, but he did not find— For workings spare'd him, why, they knew not well.

Perchance his mind was moulded not as theirs, And with his thoughts did not sympathize, For oft strange fancies, and still stranger cares, Would in his bosom peacefully arise.

He loved to wander, at soft evening's gleam, Along some solitary and no ill path, Where he might muse a murmuring streamlet glide, And scent the humble violet's balmy breath.

There he would muse on things which are apart From thoughts of busy, earth-adoring man— On Nature's secrets—and th' Almighty art Which did conceive the glowing, wondrous plan.

And music ever fell upon his soul Like sweet forgiveness on a sinner's ear, And oft a tear about his cheek would roll When some home melody he chanced to hear.

For he had early left his native shore To seek a home in a far Western clime, And thoughts of Scotia to his bosom bore The sweetest of all men's—'boyhood's time!

His soul was sensitive—apt to strive In the rude battle of the grasping world, And, like an uncles beam from the hive— Wrongs and contumely on his head were hurl'd.

But there was naught of malice or revenge In the remotest corner of his heart, He mourn'd the grief, he dreamt not to avenge, Save but by loving those who threw the dart.

Thus lived and died he, young, yet old in care; No tablet on his grave stands proud and massy, But on a rude stone carved, his latest prayer Invites the passer's sigh, "Implore a grace!"

Goderich, 25th March, 1848.

CRUSHED AFFECTIONS.—How many suffer unrequited affection? They are attached strongly to those who return them cold words, indifferent looks and even avoid their presence. A word that might not otherwise be noticed often sinks deeply into the heart of one whose life is bound up in another.

When an object is cherished, each motion is as washed off. They find a crown sends a dagger to the heart. There is no greater sin than to crush those warm affections gushing freely from a generous heart. It dries up the fountain of the soul—leaves it sunk in the check, and sheds a shadow over every bright and glorious prospect. Draw near to the heart that loves you, return the favors received, and if you cannot love in return, be careful not to bruise, or break it by a careless word—an unkind expression or an air of indifference.

PROCESS OF COINING GOLD. The process of coining gold is very accurately and succinctly described in a recent letter to the Boston Post. We condense the description as follows: The miners have to grind the gold rock fine—keeping it wet constantly, and as it becomes fine, it is washed off. They find a piece of stone for grinding. They then mix quicksilver with it, and collect the gold dust. It is washed out, dried, and goes through some kind of beating process.

The gold dust is then usually sold to the superintendent of the mint, and the value of each parcel has to be assayed. The assaying is the most curious and scientific of all the business in the mint. The miners take the gold dust, melt it, and cast it into bars, when it is weighed accurately and pieces are cut off for the assay. He takes it, melts it with twice its weight in silver in connection with several times its weight of lead.—It is melted in some small cups made of bone-ashes, which absorb all the lead, when a larger part of the silver is extracted by another process, and the sample is then rolled out to a thin slaving, coiled up and put in a sort of glass phial called a matrass along with some nitric acid.

The matrass is put on a furnace, and the acids boiled sometime, poured off, a new supply put in, and boiled again. This is done several times, till the acid has extracted all the silver and other mineral substances, leaving the sample pure gold.—The sample is then weighed, and by the difference between the weight before assaying and after, the true value is formed.—The gold after it has been assayed, is melted and refined, and being mixed with due proportion of alloy (equal parts of silver and copper) is drawn into long strips, in shape not unlike an iron hoop for casks; the round pieces are cut out with a sort of punch each piece weighed and brought to the right size by a file, if too heavy, when it is melted, or the edge raised and put into a stamping press, whence it comes forth a perfect coin, bearing the endorsement of "U. S."

FIGHTING AND PAINTING.—There are in the United States from ten to fifteen thousand persons connected with the press, comprising editors, reporters, printers, pressmen and devils. As a class, they are unquestionably the best educated, most talented, most energetic, the most original, the most patriotic part of the population. Of this number, probably a thousand or fifteen hundred joined the invading army, and assisted materially in achieving the splendid victories that have astonished themselves and the world. From the moment they entered Mexico, till the present time, they have fought and printed as they went along. At every halting place and every town they captured they started a newspaper, and at the present moment there are nearly a dozen Anglo-American newspapers printed and circulated in the enemy's country. These journals, though small in size, are well got up, and display considerable talent and ability. They cannot fail in working a great change in the minds of the people; and in the event of its becoming necessary to permanently occupy the whole of Mexico, will exercise an important influence in the preservation of order and quiet. The press is altogether a new element in the prosecution of war, and the troops of America have the honor of being the first to introduce it.—American Paper.

CHIEF.—A large dog, that goes unchained, and barks at everything he does not comprehend.

WRINKLES.—"Young woman would you have wrinkles on your face?" "Not for the world," you reply. Then cease fretting, and murmuring, and teeping. Rise at early dawn, take the broom, sweep the floor, make the beds, and get breakfast yourself. Such employment, with a cheerful heart, will keep you from growing prematurely old, and having your face lined with wrinkles and scowls.

MARK OF A KNAVE.—Fondness for children denotes not only a kind heart, but a guileless one. A knave always detests children; their innocent looks and open brows speak daggers to him; he sees his own villainy reflected from their countenance as from a mirror.—Always mark the man who avoids children.

A GOOD REASON.—"Bill," said Bob, "why is that tree called a weeping willow?" "Cause one of the sneaking dratted things grew near our school-house, and supplied the master with the sticks that did all the boys' licking."

"I have very little respect for the ties of this world," as the chap said who the rope was put around his neck.

Women are sooner angry than men, the sick than the healthy, and old men than young men.

FOREIGN PERIODICALS.

RE-PUBLICATION OF THE LONDON QUARTERLY REVIEW, EDINBURGH REVIEW, FOREIGN QUARTERLY REVIEW, WESTMINSTER REVIEW, and BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE.

THE above Periodicals are reprinted in New York, immediately on their arrival by the British Steamers, in a beautiful clear type, on fine white paper, and are faithful copies of the original—Blackwood's Magazine being an exact fac-simile of the Edinburgh edition.

The wide-spread fame of these splendid Periodicals renders it needless to say much in their praise. As literary organs, they stand far in advance of any works of a similar stamp now published, while the political complexion of each is marked by a dignity, candour, and forbearance not often found in works of a party character.

They embrace the views of the three great parties in England—Whig, Tory, and Radical—Blackwood and the London Quarterly are Tory; the Edinburgh Review, Whig; and the Westminster, Radical. The Foreign Quarterly is purely literary, being devoted principally to criticisms on foreign Continental Works.

The prices of the Re-prints are less than one-third of those of the foreign copies, and while they are equally well got up, they afford all that advantage to the American or the English reader.

Four copies of any or all of the above works will be sent to one address on payment of the regular subscription for three—the fourth copy being gratis.

Remittances and communications must be made in all cases without expense to the publishers. The former may always be done through a Postmaster, by handing him the amount to be remitted taking his receipt, and forwarding it by mail, post-paid; or the money may be enclosed in a letter, post-paid, directed to the publishers.

N. B.—The postage on these Periodicals is reduced by the late Post Office Law to about one-third the former rates, making a very important saving in the expense to mail subscribers.

In all the principal cities and towns throughout the United States to which there is a direct Railroad or Water communication from the City of New York, these periodicals will be delivered free of postage.

LEONARD SCOTT & Co., Publishers, 112, Folsom-st., N. Y. Subscribers in Canada, may receive their numbers at the nearest American Post Office. Goderich, Jan. 28, 1848.
