Humorous Items.

"Jake," said an old farmer, "can you tell me the reason why no vessel ever sails with horns there are in a chestnut?" "No," replied Jake, "but I know how many horns there are in a quart of ale."

The editor of a Yankee newspaper says that he never dozed on a bet once in his life, and that was in a fight with a contemporary.

A boy went into a tureen's shop the other day, and asked to have to turn out a jobber. He returned and turned the joker out instead.

"Do you mean to challenge the jury," whispered a lawyer to his Irish client, in California. "Yes, be jabers," was the answer, "if they don't acquit me, I mean to challenge every spalpeen of 'em. I want you to give 'em all a lump of it, too."

A barrister observed to a learned brother in court, the other day, that the wearing of whiskers was unprofessional. "Right," replied his friend, "a lawyer cannot be too bearnaced."

Sheridan, scholar, wit, and spendthrift, being dunned by a tailor to pay at least the interest on his bill, answered that it was not his interest to pay the principal, nor his principal to pay the interest.

A Frenchman writing a letter in English to a friend, and looking in the dictionary for the word preserve, and finding it meant to pickle, wrote as follows:—May you and your family be pickled to all eternity!

"Is your father at home?" inquired a man of the little girl who admitted him. "Is your name Bill?" she asked. "Some people call me so" replied he. "Then he is not at home; for I heard him tell John, if any Bill came here to say he was not at home."

An Arkansas traveller says that he knew a young fellow, down South, who was so fond of a girl that he rubbed his nose off kissing her shadow on the wall.

A convalescent student on being inquired at whether his health was still improving, pleasantly replied sic sum.

While Mrs. Butler was playing Juliet, at Philadelphia, and just when she had exclaimed "Oh! cruel poison!" a tall, lean, gaunt, sandy-haired medical student in the stage box deeply deeded in the scene, thrust down his hat on his head with a convulsive effort, crying out in a voice of thunder at the same time. "Keep him up, Juliet—I'll run and fetch the stomach pump!"

Revivification after Hanging.

The subjoined incident we had from a friend whose father was High Sheriff of Tyrone about forty years ago. A country lad was hanged at Omagh for sheep-stealing—a penalty and an offence frequently associated at that epoch. After the prescribed time, the criminal was cut down and delivered to his friends for interment. They made the usual attempt at reviving him, and in this instance succeeded. The man recovered, retaining no outward marks of what had happened beyond a slight distortion of the neck. It was thought by many that he had no right to be among the living, and that unholy agencies had helped him. He was shunned by his former companions, could obtain no work, and wandered about as alms beggar. Necessity drove him to the house of the gentleman who, in his official duty, had superintended the execution. He recognized, relieved and dismissed him, not being disposed to pursue the matter further. But first, as a physical inquiry, asked him to describe his sensations on being turned off. He replied that he felt the jerk, but not so acutely as to produce insensibility, or even confusion. He appeared to have the power of looking above, below and around. All was of a bright vermilion color. An agreeable sensation had crept through his frame until he became insensible. "But," he added, "I can find no words to express the agony of gradually returning to consciousness!" Necessity, or what modern cant would call "his mission," drove him back to his old trade, which drove him again to the gallows, but this time without the benefit of resuscitation.—Dublin University Magazine.

Crinoline Dethroned.

According to a Parisian expositor of the fashions of the day, crinoline has received notice of its final banishment from aristocratic circles. "It particularly draws the attention of the followers of high ton to the fact that at the ball at the Tuileries, on Wednesday evening, her Imperial Majesty, dressed with her usual exquisite taste, exhibited une grande sobriété dans l'ampleur des entournures," a delicate way of expressing the absence of that detestable cage which adds so much to female dimensions. The Empress's example, it appears' has been imitated by all those who have pretensions to mingle in the circles of fashionable life." The consequence is, that the impediment to the free circulation of the guests is now in some measure removed, and the grand staircase of the Tuileries, which has lately been almost impracticable at a certain hour of the evening, when the early party departs and the later visitors present themselves, now ascended without the usual difficulty. At one of the representations at the Theatre Comptene the crinoline was voted an absurd and enormous nuisance. The ladies only found seats. The swaddlers were compelled to stand the whole of the evening. At the ball on Wednesday evening the Duchesse de Persigny and Madame Say were the theme of general admiration. Their toilet was pronounced irreproachable. They, too, had renounced the repudiated crinoline. A struggle has commenced between the pro and anti-crinolinists the former being still in the majority. The dressmakers will not let the fashion of exaggerated wide circling robes and over crowded decorations go out if they can help it

A Wife Shot by her Husband.—S. L. Hyde, a United States detective, connected with the Provost Marshal's office in New Haven, Conn., last night, on returning home, asked his wife to get him some cartridges that he might reload his revolver. As she started to comply with his request, the hammer of his weapon slipped from his fingers and the pistol went off, the ball entering the heart of his wife. The unfortunate woman sprang forward exclaiming, "I am killed; kiss me before I die," and in a moment was dead.

The Michigan Murderer.—The young man, Bevins, arrested for the murder of his father, mother and wife, to enable him to marry a young woman for whom he had formed an attachment, is in jail at Adrian, Mich. Capital punishment is abolished in Michigan; but the fearful crime has produced so much excitement, that there was for a time great fears that the people would inflict summary punishment upon the murderer. Bevins is an only child, and only 22 years of age. He says that he has never had his slightest wish thwarted by his parents, and to this indulgence in some measure may be attributed his ungovernable passions.
