Practical Philanthropy. To do good to the utmost limits of our capability is the first duty as it is the highest privilege of the Christian, and in no way can more real benefit be conferred upon mankind than in making known far and wide a sure and certain means of escape from that deadly malady consumption. Where is the family that does not reckon among those of its circle who have gone before one victim to this direful disease? It chooses the fairest, the brightest, the best, and when a fond parent sees pale consumption stealing into a loved daughter's bosom, flushing her cheek, bleaching her skin, and revelling like a living hail as a deliverer sent from heaven one bearing in his hand a remedy, which would save his darling from a yawning grave. The mother anxiously watching the boy of her love who at the threshold of manhood is seized by the destroyer Miss E. Carney, who has been for and dragged with ruthless and unflinching hame time in Detroit and Toronto, rewith all a mother's heart the power which could save him. BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the flatural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until-strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of suttle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette"
