

BEAVER FLOUR

combines the rich gluten of Manitoba Spring wheat and the lighter, but equally important, properties of Ontario Fall wheat. The two combined form a perfectly blended flour that makes bread light, white, nutritious and extremely palatable, while pastry made with Beaver Flour has a crisp, flaky texture that brings many a compliment to the cook.

You don't need to be an expert in baking to attain the best results with BEAVER FLOUR.

But if you are an expert, you will readily recognize its incomparable qualities.

Your grocer has BEAVER FLOUR, and will recommend it.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"Go back to earth with a lip unsealed, go back with an open eye. And carry my word to the sons of men or ever ye come to die."

That the sin they do by two and two they must pay for one by one—And the God that ye took from a printed book be with you Tomlinson—

There seems to exist in most of us a tendency to minimize a fault or mistake, if we find that our neighbor has committed the same mistake.

We seem to fancy that, in some unknown way, sin grows less by company, and that if we can point to a goodly number of people and say they sinned the same sin as we, we thereby diminish our own offense.

For instance, if you as one of a group of girls, should make fun of, or in any way treat some girl unkindly, and should be taxed with your conduct, you would undoubtedly say, "I couldn't help it. I only did what the rest did."

As a matter of fact, if you did not try to prevent the unkindness you thereby became responsible for it.

And not only for a share of it, but for the whole.

For, paradoxical as it may sound, responsibility is a quantity which may be divided by any number and yet remain the same.

It is a moral law that if a group of three is guilty of any wrong each one of them is responsible not for one-third, but for the whole of the fault.

I read an article the other day in one of the current magazines on divided responsibility which I wish I could transcribe bodily. If you run across it be sure to read it. The gist of it was that many individuals belonging to corporations or other associations countenance acts which they would by no means do as individuals. They seem to think that because many are involved, responsibility is divided. The article points out that the consequences of their approval or consent are as damaging as if they each committed the act individually, and, therefore, their responsibility is as great.

As individuals I think we often countenance usages and customs that we admit are wrong, because, "Everyone else does and my standing out against it would do no good."

My grandfather was a Methodist minister. He believed the Bible meant what it said about its being wrong to work on Sunday. He believed if he allowed people to work for him on Sunday he would be responsible for their sinning, and he therefore refused to avail himself of any train or car service on Sunday. He often had to preach at many places many miles from his own parish, but he either went to the place a day or two before-hand or if it were absolutely necessary to go on Sunday, he walked.

He was often known to walk five or ten miles on a Sunday morning before the half-past ten service.

A great many people rallied at him as foolish and quixotic, and said, "The trains will run whether you ride in them or not. It isn't your fault that they run and you don't help any walking yourself to death."

But my grandfather always answered, "If I ride in them the responsibility of their being run on Sunday becomes mine. I do not believe in men working on Sunday. I will not countenance it by availing myself of the fruits of their labour."

Maybe you, too, say he is foolish, but surely you will admit that it was a mighty fine kind of foolishness, the kind that stands behind great reforms and great movements, a kind we could well have a great deal more of to-day.

"Everyone is fully responsible for every evil that he in any way countenances."

That is an exacting doctrine, but I do believe it is true, and an ideal that if men would live towards would do much to bring about the millennium.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

HOUSEHOLD NOSES.

If troubled with rats, use crude oil freely.

Milk is much better for wiping off linoleum than water.

Meat soaked in crude oil is said to be excellent bait for rodents.

Copper may be cleaned by scouring with a cut lemon dipped in salt.

A damp chamomile is indispensable for wiping off picture frames that are enameled.

To make a boracic acid solution use one teaspoon boracic acid to one pint of water.

A slice of bacon cooked with spinach or other greens gives a delightful seasoning.

Always scald the milk used in making a custard. Then when it is baked it will be always smooth.

A little alum dissolved in the water in which cretonne is washed is an aid in keeping colors bright.

It is better to keep tea and coffee in airtight glass jars, in a place not exposed to strong light.

Scatter sassafras bark with woolen goods and furs when putting them away for the summer. It keeps moths out.

For wiping off a varnished paper, use warm water and paraffin—half a cupful of paraffin to a pailful of water.

Strong soap suds and water in which there is washing soda is fatal to china or glassware decorated in gilt.

A little vaseline or oil rubbed over a stove when it is taken down for the summer months will prevent rusting.

Always keep two large sponges for house cleaning purposes, one to wash wood-work with and one to use if rinsing.

Tartaric acid will remove almost any iron rust blemish from material and it is excellent for removing yellow marks.

To clean ivory, brush with a soft tooth brush using lukewarm water. If the ivory is discolored use a little alcohol.

In mashing potatoes, it pays to heat the milk adding the butter to the milk, before turning into the mashed potatoes.

There is no better way to remove egg stains from silver than by rubbing vigorously with a damp cloth dipped in salt.

If a few pin holes are made in an egg shell before the egg is boiled, there will be no danger of cracks in the shell.

In keeping vegetables, do not keep different kinds in the same basket. If

CONSTIPATION

Any irregularity of the bowels is always dangerous and should be at once attended to and corrected.
