Every effort was exerted to keep secret the identity of the prisoner, but those interested in Kaiserwetter learned of his arrest and promptly appealed to the government legal department, which found that England was not entitled to arrest him until peace had been declared. The examination was held in the greatest secrecy and there was no announcement of the ruling. This decision has negatived much of the work the admiralty has done in tracing the perpetrators of the more barbarous submarine warfare. In view of the great amount of secret work done on various cases of this kind, the Kaiserwetter ruling came as a bombshell to admiralty officers.

Some Chestnuts and Some Others.

HOW IT WORKED.

In the absence of her husband the fascinating young married woman went motoring with an old admirer. "Ah," sighed the man sentimentally, "if only you had married me instead of Wilkinson!"

"Then I should have been with Mr. Wilkinson at this moment, instead of you," said the fascinating girl. "How strangely things turn out!"

A SILENT TRAGEDY.

Sweeping his long hair back with an impressive gesture, the visitor faced the proprietor of the film studio.

"I would like to secure a place in your moving picture company," he said.

"You are an actor?" asked the film-man.

"Yes."

"Had any experience acting without audiences?"

"A flicker of sadness shone in the visitor's eyes as he replied:

"Acting without audiences is what brought me here."

HIS REASON.

The new minister was paying a visit. The small boy of the house shook hands very politely.

"And now, my little man," the minister said, "what are you going to be when you grow up?"

To the surprise of the assembled family, the child said: "I'm going to be a preacher."

"That's good! I am glad to hear you say that," said the minister, taking the boy on his knee.

Encouraged by this friendliness, the boy continued:

"Yeth, thir, I'm going to be a preacher. I would wather be a lawyer, but I haven't got themthe enough, and I'll have to be a preacher."

WHAT HURT MOST.

The middle-aged couple sat side by side on the garden-seat, looking as miserable as two lost geese in a hard hail-storm.

A neighbour asked why they were so sad, in view of the fact that the sun shone brightly and the birds sang in the adjacent boughs.

"Alas!" answered the man. "We have been gardening. Both of us are somewhat absent-minded, and after thinking it over I fear my wife planted the liver pills and I have taken the sweet peas. However, we are not absolutely sure about it, and it is the uncertainty that hurts."

PUT TO THE TEST.

"What are those splendid silver cups there?" inquired the man in the jeweller's shop.

"Those, sir, are race cups to be awarded as prizes," replied the jeweller.

"Well, if that's the case," said the stranger, taking the biggest one in his hands, "suppose you race me for this one."

He started off with the jeweller after him, but the stranger won the race.

NO HOPE.

The young man brought some verses to his father.

"Father," he said, "I have written poems."

"What! Let me see them instantly."

The father read them over carefully, the tears slowly welling to his eyes as he did so. Finishing the last one he threw down the manuscript, folded the boy to his breast, and sobbed:

"Oh, my poor, poor son!"

"Are they so bad as that, father?"

"Bad! They are excellent. They are real poetry. My boy, my boy, you will starve to death!"

SHE WON.

The race for the last word was getting hot. Hubby and wife were running neck and neck.

"You did!" he snapped.

"I didn't!" she retorted.

"You did!"

"I did not!"

The pace was slowing.

"Well," flashed hubby, "one of us two is a very capable liar. But there is one thing which prevents me saying which one."

"Modesty, I presume!" retorted wife.

SUSPICIOUS.

"Isn't it glorious here?" she exclaimed, when the waiter in the expensive restaurant had taken their orders.

"Do you think so?" replied her fiancé.

"It's perfectly lovely. Everything is in such harmony—the fountain, the flowers, the swaying lanterns, the music—everything is ideal. It's like fairyland."

"I'm glad you like it."

"I'm simply enchanted. Doesn't it make you feel as if you had stepped out of the everyday world into something strange and new?"

"Not a bit."

"What's the matter? You don't seem to be enjoying yourself!"

"Well, my boss is sitting at the third table over there to your left. I can tell by his look that he's wondering how I can afford to eat at a place like this."

Make soap go further.

You can do it this way:

—Insist on getting a soap that is all soap—that is Sunlight Soap.

—You will then be sure of full value in real soap—no impurities.

—For this reason it is easy to economise with Sunlight Soap, because its purity makes it the most economical and, at the same time, the most effective of household soaps.

—Every particle does its work of making your linen clean and fresh.

—Sunlight Soap is guaranteed pure.

—For economy and efficiency insist on SUNLIGHT SOAP.

Travelling in Germany.

(From the Westminster Gazette.)

With regard to travelling in Germany just now, passengers enjoy few, if any, of the comforts of previous years. Unheated carriages in a country where even the trams used to be comfortably warmed must be anything but luxurious in winter, and the lack of window-glass does not make the prospect of a long journey more attractive. Most of the carriage doors, too, are jammed, and male passengers climb in or out by the window-frames, while women have to be lifted through the openings. As for the cold, it must be very severely felt by people used to what we should consider a dangerous excess of artificial heat. Indeed, I have heard of a case in which the stove in the corner of the carriage was guarded by a sheet of metal which itself was red hot, and a country girl sat close by, enjoying the warmth. Distinctions between classes have gone by the board, and the popular retort of a German if asked why he is travelling first-class with a fourth-class ticket is: "Have we had a revolution, or have we not?"

Somehow common sense always comes to the rescue of the English-speaking people. They get in a terrible muss—and then climb out. There always are enough level-headed ones on hand to save the situation. It is one of the results of a long tradition of individual initiative and freedom.
