CHAPTER IV.

How little does one-half the world know how the other half lives. The streams of life, like the waters of the Rhine and the Moselle, though they down the same channel, fatten the same pastures, turn the same mill and eddy over the same shoals, meet, but mingle not; and what interests are there in common between No. 1 and No. 2 of any firest, square or row in the great city? Your next-door neighbor, the man who by a party-wall of one brick and a halfan in thickness, may be a colner, an Italian refugee, or an alchemist in scarced his, and while the rosy drasms, did with or the contrary. I suppose, with the variety of a little more bloodshed and a little more fliration, things went on in Babylon the Great much as they do in the London of today. The wine cup bubbled again and again usque ad nauseam for the high and the low gasped in vain for a mouthful of pure cold water. The Assyrian in purple wallowed in profusion until he longed for a sensation, even though it were the sting of pain; while the Assyrian in rags starved and drooped at his gates, faint and hungry and weary of his life. It was the bees whose sweltering labor constructed those hangweary of his life. It was the bees whose sweltering labor constructed those hanging gardens, the fame of which reached the uttermost ends of the known earth, but it was the drones who walked delicately along their terraces, and languished in their perfumed bowers, and caught the diamond drops from their splashing fountains, gushing, and glittering, and hurling themselves upward against the scorching sky.

So the bees and the drones jostle each other today in the crowded thoroughfares of London, and some take the rough and some take the rough and some take the smooth, and they have nothing in common, and know each other

A section of the bees are clustering very busily in a musical portion of the hive. There is a morning concert this afternoon, and the professionals are all in tune and time, preparing for the grand effects and combinations which delight the dilettante, and of which less-instructed listeners deem it incumbent on structed listeners deem it incumbent on them to say: "Magnificent! very fine!" They are assembling even now in a little room off the grand hall, which is already half filled with an impatient audience, reduced to the sad necessity of criticising each other's dresses, and dirtying their gloves with the programme as they read it over and over again. The drones are always employed in doing nothing, and always very tired of that laborious occupation. The bees seem to enjoy their half-hour's respite, and to have a good deal of fun and cordiality among them-

The male portion are chiefly remarkable for the extreme accuracy of their toilets, and the purity of their close-fitting white kid gloves, which, with black evening coats and continuations, seem somewhat out of place at 3 a'clock in the day. They are either men of extremely martial appearance, running considerably to whisker, and in some cases close-cut beard, or else they affect an open simplicity of countenance amounting to vacuity, enhanced by bare throats and long hair trained studiously off the temples, and flowing down the nape of The male portion are chiefly remarktemples, and flowing down the nape of the neck, than which, in my humble opinion, no fashion is more unbecoming to the face of a male adult.

You would make some strange mistakes, though, if you judged of their tones by their appearance. The large, well-built fellow, with the legs and chest of a Hercules, is the tenor, and if you only heard that soft, silvery voice of his quivering and thrilling on the sands by moonlight, you would fancy such seductive notes could proceed from nothing less feminine than a mermaid, instead of a stout, soldier-like convivalist, who would incontinently offer you a cigar and take you home with him to a Perigord pie and a cool bottle of claret.

The bass, again, whose diapason shall The bass, again, whose diapason shall make the very window-glasses shake before sunset, is a pale, weary-tooking man, whom at first sight you would call weakly, if not an invalid. His tailor alone knows that he requires a larger girth round the chest than most Life Guardsmen, and indeed the organ that c.c. evolve such music as that deep thunderroll must be endowed with valves and material of no ordinary strength—and dimensions. He has a wife and large family to be provided for out of the low notes of that instrument, and already an unpleasant suspicion dawns upon him that it will not last forever. Great was fore sunset, is a pale, weary-looking man

The lady singers are in low evening dresses, and most of them wear their hair a l'Imperatrice. They are whispering and talking to each other with that busy, good-humored cordiality which the sex is prone to affect in public places, and those who have not brought bouquets with them are vehemently admiring the Faint Spells, Dizziness, or any and those who have not brought boudgets with them are vehemently admiring the flowers of those who have. One sits a little apart from the rest; she is attired very simply in mourning, and carries a half-blown rose in her bosom. As she drops her head over the score in her hand, the tenor, who has something of a painter's taste, thinks she would make a pretty picture with her white shoulders relieved by her black dress, and the nut-brown hair shading and hiding her face, while a sunbeam, slanting through the window, brings out a gold tinge on the glossy head. He is a softhearted, good-humored man, this tenor, and cherishes a romantic and self-denying adoration for many ladies, both in and out of the profession, and for this one especially, the more so that there is a quiet reserve in her manner, by which he is abashed not a little, and that after he has said "Good morning!" he generally falters, puts his hands in his pockets, and becomes mute.

make him happy ever afterward. I sometimes think this strange predilection originates in the instinctive jealousy and love of appropriation so remarkable in the sex. Beauty thinks nobody else will care to interfere with Bruin, and it increases the baye aven a beast all to will care to interfere with Bruin, and it is pleasant to have even a beast all to herself; but old Flippant, for whose lengthened experience in such matters I have the profoundest respect, takes a wider view of the subject, and refers all such incongruities to the general principle such incongruities to the general principle of contradiction, and the impossibility of arguing from probability, expediency or any other national data, as to what a woman, under any given circumstances, will or will not do, or let alone, or otherwise.

This case of Mr. James Treneman, the well-known butcher, of 536 Ade-

It is at such times that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills prove themselves prompt to give relief and certain to effect a cure. The evidence to prove this fact is simply overwhelming. owTwo Mr. James Treneman states: years ago I was laid up with kidney disease and urinary troubles. Besides the pain and inconvenience caused by these troubles, I became dropsical, and my legs would swell up so that I could scarcely go around at all. Hearing of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, now I can say for a certainty that I am entirely cured. DATES FOR CANADA CUP RACES FIXED.

Toronto, Ont., June 17 .- Members of the Rochester yacht club and the Royal Canadian yacht club of Toronto met here yesterday and fixed the dates for the Canada cup races for Aug. 15, 17 and 19, 1903. There was discussion over the class of boat for the race, which will be settled later. The conditions are three races in five to de-

THE TURE.

WONDERLY'S ACHIEVEMENT. Toronto Star: Three years ago at Woodbine the London contingent believed they had a sure winner of the Queen's Plate in Miss Dart. Rather than trust in any of the regular jockeys, the Londoners brought down a boy to exercise the filly and also to The boy in question was Otto Won-

In private Miss Dart made the fastest trial of any candidate for the Guineas, but in the race she was nowhere, and the London contingent blamed the rider.

"Go back to the bush, and cut wood for a living," they cried at Wonderly, and for a time the boy's aspirations to become a jockey were badly dimmde. Saturday at Sheepshead Bay, before 50,000 people, the same Otto Wonderly, despised and rejected at Woodbine three short years before, was the hero of the hour, he having just ridden Gold Heels, the 4-year-old son of The Bard -Heel and Toe, the winner of the Suburban handicap. According to the New York critics, Gold Heels' victory was due in a large measure to Wonderly's perfect jockeyship. In three years, therefore, Wonderly has worked himself up from an obscure stable boy to be the leading 3 to 5, won by a length; On the Quiet, jockey in the land. His perseverance and pluck have had their reward.

MATCH RACE FOR $20,000. New York, June 17.-It has been definitely settled that the match race between Thos. Lawson's Boralma and E. E. Smathers' Lord Derby or a side stake of $20,000, shall take place at Hartford on Saturday, Aug. 2. The horses have been matched, and forfeits of $5,000 have been posted for

timated prices:

At last advices Green B. Morris had not decided whether he would send Old England, Homestead or both. His intention is to delay shipment until a days before the race, so as to avoid the possible effects of change of climate. As Mr. Morris puts it, he wants the race to be over before his horses realize the change. If Morris starts only one, Sam Doggett will have the mount. If two go on the service of Bullman will be enlisted. Bullman seems to exercise a strange influence over the American Derby. At the last moment in 1900 he secured the mount on Sidney Lucas, and Sidney Lucas won. Again in 1901 he was mountless up to 49 minutes before post time. Then a few heavy speculators who had backed Robert Waddell persueded "Pa" Bradley to allow Bullman I procured a box and continued the to manage his gelding. The old Viruse of this valuable medicine until ginian demurred for awhile, as he wanted to put up his colored jockey, Seaton, but at the last moment he was persuaded and Bullman was tossed into the saddle. Robert Waddell won, If Bullman is on the grounds on the day of the race he will not have to go begging for a mount. It will not require much persuasion on the part of outsile speculators to secure him a mount.

He knows the turns of the Washington

Park track, and is quite familiar with

he Derby distance. If he rides Old England, that entry of Mr. Morris will be a well-backed horse.

Heno arrived here fit to go to the post, and his exercise between now and the race will be according to schedule laid down before he left New York. He was given a useful gallop Thursday morning, and has had another since. Tuesday morning he will be set down for a stiff breeze over the Derby route. Hermis traveled at a more leisurely pace from New York, and is now stabled at Hawthorne, where Trainer Charles Hughes is giving him his final preparation. Hughes does not stand in awe of the western contingent, and figures that the only one he has to beat is Heno. Arthur Featherstone, owner of Arsenal, agrees with Mr. Morris in the matter of late shipment. Arsenal, accompanied by Trainer Julius Bauer, will not arrive at Washington Park until three days before the race, barely time enough to get the kinks out of his legs before the race. The stable jockey, Winnie O'Connor, will accom-Jacob Worth, the owner of Oom Paul, has not relinquished his claim on the Derby, but that good colt has chang-ed handlers so often recently that his programme is a matter of doubt. Mr. Worth may decide at the last moment to send him out. It depends largely on a canvass of the company he will have to meet in eastern stakes that are run about the time of the Derby, Dixieline is another subject of a guess. At pre-sent he is marked doubtful. If Pentecost comes out of the Suburban safe and sound, John E. Madden will likely send him to Chicago.

A Mount Vernon, Ohio, correspondent of the Buffalo Horse World writes on a subject that has created much interest among horsemen, as follows: "Reading the interesting story in your paper written by "A Man from Texas," in regard to pacers among wild horses, would say that in 1882 on the staked plains in North and Western Texas, about 120 miles northwest of Fort Worth, there were wild horses Big Race Tracks. of Fort Worth, the by the hundreds, and as the "Man from Texas" said there we almost always some fast pacers in every bunch. I would vouch for the story he told, and I will recall two instances in which remarkably fast pacers were caught by myself and a half dozen other men. One was a dun, or, what we called in Texas at that time, a buckskin color, with black mane and tail, 15.1 in height and weigh ed about 900 pounds, that was caught gelded and broken and used for a sad dle horse. He could pace a half mile faster than any pony in those parts

> "We followed the bunch for ten days, and finally lassoed him in a little canon at the western edge of the plains, in what was called the Guadaloupe canon in those days.

"The other one was a red bay horse with black points, a really fine looker, but he was only 14½ hands high and weighed about 750 pounds. The same crowd cut him off from the bunch he was running with, and as he came down the fence the boys that were stationed there waiting, lassoed him. He was also gelded and broken as a saddle horse, and he, like the other, never did anything but pace; it was what we call single footing, but either one could go at that gait as fast as the average pony could run. These two were caught out of bunches of about 60 head, and, as the "Man from Texas" has said, there are plenty of fast pacers among every band of wild ponies roaming the prairies of the southwest.

"There were about 400 head of wild horses at the head of Running Waters, at the north edge of the staked plains in 1882, in one bunch, and as nearly as we could judge there were between 25 and 30 of them that could pace or, in reality, single foot, as fast as the other part of the bunch could run; for I there was almost level for 150 miles Batteries—Yerkes, Dunham and O'Neil; square it was hardly any use to try W. The Egyptian woman looks greatly overburdened, and yet the physical burdens she carries will not compare with the burdens borne by many an American woman. There is no burden like the burden of disease. The woman who suffers from inflammation or ulceration, bearing-down pains, weak back and nervousness, bears a burden which crushes her very life.

Every woman should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well. It cures the womanly diseases which cause weak ness and feebleness. It quiets the nerves, cures the aching back and throbbing head, and gives strength for wifely cares and maternal duties.

"When I first wrote to you I was in a bad condition, and had almost given up," says Mrs. Bella Snider, of Wilkesville, Vinton Co., Ohio. "I was suffering from female trouble of the worst kind; I couldn't eat anything without suffering great distress; throat hurt me by spells; was nervous and weak. Had numb hands and arms, heart trouble, pains all through my body and aching head and neck. It seemed that I could not work at all. I got Dr. Pierce's medicine and took it as directed, and the first week it began to help me. I took three bottles and am glad to say that it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever took. I feel better than I have for years."

Longevity of Dogs.

The age to which a dog lives in the ordinary course is always a somewhat interesting subject, especially at the present time, when so much is done in the way of breeding for early maturity. For instance, we have both Batteries-Yeager and Buelow; Orth and champions before they are well out of their puppyhood, but it is sad to say that in a majority of such cases the over-shown dog afterward rapidly degenerates or dies an early death. A correspondent writes to the Field of the death of his fox terrier at the advanced age of 18 years, having been born in 1884. He was either a son of a grandson of Brokenhurst Joe, his late owner does not know which. This is, no doubt, a case of unusual longevity; but instances of dogs living to 14 and 15 years are common. rD. Leeney recorded the death of a dog of Lord Ogilvie's at 23 years old, it arising from an accident; while Mr. W. L. Littleton-Geach about the same time mentioned two of his own dogs, one of which was then living hard on to 20 years old; the other had just died when over that age. The well-known fox terrier Belgrave Joe was born July 31, 1868, and died Jan. 13, 1888, while another aged terrier was one of a working stamp which came from George Carter, of the Bedale, born in January, 1880, and died Feb. 13, 1900. In several of the above well-authenticated cases of longevity death either arose from accident or was brought about by the owner owing to the growing feebleness of the poor creature. No mean can be struck as to the average of their old rivals of the Canadian age of the ordinary dog, but this might be taken at 10 years as he is now .-Pall Mall Gazette.

Permanent Muscular Strength There is this to be borne in mind in these days, when so many young men are giving so much attention to physical de-velopment in gymnastic and athletic ex-ercises, that there cannot be permanent muscular strength where there is not blood strength. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives blood strength, promotes digestion and assimilation, and builds up the whole system.
