

WOMEN and THE HOME

Miss Pauline Ward Weds Mr. J. W. York of Ottawa

Cronyn Memorial Church Is Scene of Quiet But Interesting Wedding.

TRIP TO NEW YORK

Cronyn Memorial church was the scene of an interesting event at 6 o'clock last night, when Pauline Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ward, King street, became the bride of James Warren York, son of Mrs. William M. York of Ottawa, the Rev. G. Quintin Warner performing the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a modish tailored ensemble in beige and Morocco tones, with smart hat to match. And she carried an arm bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Anne Ward, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, wearing a graceful gown of powder blue georgette crepe, a hat to match, and carried an old-fashioned nosegay. Mr. Chas. McCrae of Lindsay attended the groom. During the signing of the register a member of the Cronyn Memorial choir sang "O Promise Me."

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, bridal roses, palms and spring flowers being used with pretty decorative effect. Mrs. Ward, who received the guests with the bridal party, wore a smart ensemble costume of blue cut velvet trimmed with gray fur. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Wright of Ottawa. Later the bride and groom left by motor for Hamilton and a trip through the Adirondacks to New York. They will return to Ottawa about the first of June, making their home there.

WOMAN MUST LIVE UP TO HER OPPORTUNITIES

Mrs. John Rose Delivers Inspiring Address at Boyle Memorial.

That woman's opportunity had come along more rapidly than was expected and that the women of the age should live up to that opportunity was the message brought to the Boyle Memorial Mothers club last night by Mrs. John Rose, school trustee.

The subject of Mrs. Rose's address was "Things that do and should interest women." She spoke in glowing terms of the mothers club work of the city and what an advance had been made since its organization twenty years ago. The movement started in London had now spread throughout the country. Its executive body was the great Home and School Federation meeting yearly in Toronto, something of the work of which she had seen this Easter in Toronto. The report of this federation was brought to the meeting by Mrs. J. Darling, the club now spread a fine musical program included violin numbers by Miss Kathleen Bowby and Master Hawthorne with Mrs. Armstrong as accompanist. Selection from a girls' orchestra comprised of Miss E. Eagan, Miss F. Campbell and Miss M. Smith.

The election of officers will take place at the June meeting when the annual reports will be submitted by Mrs. Frank Stokes, Mrs. C. Ball, Mrs. J. McKay, Mrs. M. Thompson and Mrs. Creary.

MISS KATHERINE McLEAN, who has been acting as deaconess for St. Paul's cathedral parish during the past year, is now giving up her work at the cathedral to enter upon a special course of training at the Henry Ford training school in Detroit. Miss McLean, who goes to Detroit in September, will spend the summer at the camp at Cedar Nook, Bay of Quinte, which she conducts annually with her sister.

NURSES TO VOTE ON 12-HOUR DUTY

Will Express Opinion on Controversial Subject Early in June.

Twelve-hour duty, in place of the existing 20-hour duty for private nurses, came up for lively discussion at last night's meeting of the Victoria hospital nurses' alumnae. There seems to be great diversity of opinion among the London nurses on this subject.

Many feel that a nurse after being on duty for more than 12 hours is not as capable of looking after her patient properly as if she were freed at the end of that time. They believe also that such long periods of duty are detrimental to the health of the nurse. On the other hand there are those who believe that the 20-hour duty is the only thing possible under the circumstances and would vote for its continuance.

The subject is now being brought before the different nursing organizations of the city, but a vote will not be taken until the annual meeting of the London nurses' registry, to be held about the last of June. Plans were made last night for the entertainment of the Victoria hospital graduation class at dinner and bridge at the Buxlow Inn on the last Saturday of May. Miss Marjorie White was named convener of this function and will appoint her own committee.

Arrangements were further made for picnic to be held at Springbank on June 13, with Miss Effie Wilson as convener. Her committee is also yet to be named.

Following the meeting last night over which Miss Agnes Malloch presided, refreshments were served.

"Nothing to Do But Keep House and Mind the Children."

A man and a woman have been having an argument about which have the harder life, men or women, and they have asked me to referee the fight. The man says that women have a soft snap because the husband has to earn the living for the family, while the wife has nothing to do but stay at home with the children. He says that the man must work, no matter how tired and sick he feels, while if the woman doesn't feel well she can lie down and take a nap and let her work go until the next day, whereas a man's work must be done on the dot.

He says that the man is worn and harried by the sense of his responsibilities, while a woman has nothing on her mind but her hat. Furthermore, he opines that a man has a perfect right to be irascible and cross and irritable at home, because his business anxieties wear his nerves to a frazzle, but that women have nothing to worry them and consequently no excuse for nervousness and so when they are ill-tempered it is nothing but pure devilment.

To this the woman replies that if he thinks being a woman is such an easy job he should try it for a while. She reminds him of the old adage that says that man works from sun to sun, but woman's work is never done, and she asks him what would happen when a hungry family came trooping in for dinner and found nothing to eat, and the woman of the house calmly reclining on a couch, because she didn't happen to feel like cooking that day. And she wants to know which is the more nerve-wearing proposition, working all day in a quiet office or store or shop, or working all day with three or four children shrieking and fighting and quarrelling under foot, and a teething baby incessantly wailing. If anybody in the family is justified in being peevish, she thinks it is the woman.

I agree with the woman in her contention that a woman has the heavier burden to bear. Life isn't easy for either men or women, but woman's lot is so much harder than man's that when I hear that a girl baby has been born I could weep tears of pity over her.

Nature itself handicaps woman. It makes her of more fragile clay and more easily broken than man. It gives her less physical strength than man, yet calls upon her to endure more. It makes her subject to all the diseases of man and then adds a few ailments of her own for good measure. It calls upon her to suffer all the anxieties and sorrows that tear at the heart of man, and makes her temporarily unfit to cope with them.

If a woman goes into business, she has to combat the prejudice against her sex, and not only do good work as a man, but better work and more of it to get the same pay. She is less able physically to stand the strain of long hours and intense application than a man is. Skirts, even if they are cut off to the knees, are a hindrance when you are trying to climb the ladder of success. Every working woman has to hold her job with one hand and defend her character with the other.

Any boy starting out to make his fortune has so much better chance of winning out than a girl has that it is no wonder that she so often gets discouraged and decides that it is better to sit down and powder her nose and marry him when he has reached the goal, than it is to try to compete with him.

The average domestic woman's life is infinitely harder than that of her husband. He works hard, but she works harder, for her day begins earlier than his does and ends later. The wife gets up and cooks breakfast, and wakens her family to come and eat it, and long after they are in bed at night she is still at work patching and mending and cleaning and pressing so that they may go forth decently clad the next day. LITERATURE HABIT BEGUN AT HOME

Nicholas Wilson Chapter Hears Inspiring Paper by Mrs. Whitton.

"Literature and the Home" was the subject of an inspiring paper given before the Nicholas Wilson Chapter yesterday afternoon by Mrs. F. A. Whitton.

Books, she said, often influenced a child more than companions. Literature was a natural resource in hours of weariness and turmoil. The cultivation of the habit of reading good literature was begun at home as was the cultivation of good manners. It began in infancy when the mother sang beautiful songs to her child or recited nursery rhymes. The speaker pointed out that people often spent hours chasing celebrities that they might have a moment with them. Yet the society of good books was constantly open to them.

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. A. D. Robertson, St. James street, an important feature being the reading of Mrs. George MacDonald's report of the provincial chapter meeting in Hamilton. Plans for an evening meeting on May 19 were made, when Prof. Dorland of the University of Western Ontario will speak on "World Citizenship." This meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. F. W. Oates, Hallmouth avenue. At the close of yesterday's meeting tea was served from a table attractively arranged with white tulips.

The painting by the late Mary Healy, donated to the chapter by her brother will be hung shortly in the public library.

Mrs. Timmy, the Flying Squirrel, Saves Her Babies From Red Terror

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Mrs. Grouse was not the only one who had made a home in the Green Forest on the other side of the old road. Even before Mrs. Grouse had moved over there Timmy the Flying Squirrel and Mrs. Timmy had chosen to make their home there, and for very much the same reason. They did love them! She was sure that never in all the Great World had there ever been such wonderful babies before. Being naturally timid babies, she couldn't bear to leave them even long enough to get food, and always she hurried back just that something had happened to them while she was away.

So in an old home of Drummer the Woodpecker, quite high up in a dead tree, they had made their home and there their babies had been born, four of them. How little Mrs. Timmy did love them! She was sure that never in all the Great World had there ever been such wonderful babies before. Being naturally timid babies, she couldn't bear to leave them even long enough to get food, and always she hurried back just that something had happened to them while she was away.

But nothing did happen, and the babies grew as is the way with babies of all kinds. And Mrs. Timmy's love for and pride in them grew as is the way with all mothers. It wouldn't be long now before they would be old enough to try their first jumps in the Great World. How Mrs. Timmy did dread that time! She couldn't bear to think of it.

One evening, just as the Black Shadows came creeping through the Green Forest, the beginning of the dark time, the safe time for timid little people like a Flying Squirrel or a Wood Mouse, Mrs. Timmy poked her head out of the little round doorway of her house, preparing to start out to look for something to eat. Something made her nose and mouth smart and sting. She scrambled out and right away her big soft eyes began to smart and fill with water. Smoke, choking, smarting smoke filled all the air. In the distance, and not such a great distance, there was a red glare. One good look Mrs. Timmy took and then darted into her house.

When she came out a few seconds later Mrs. Timmy had a baby in her mouth, holding him by the skin of the neck as you have seen a mother cat carry her kittens. She jumped and sailed down on a long giant as only a Flying Squirrel can sail. But though she did her best she did not make as long a jump as usual. She couldn't with that precious baby to carry. Along the ground she carried the baby for a short distance, but this was too slow, and climbing another tree she once more jumped.

At last she dropped the baby in an old nest in another hollow tree and hurried back for another baby. The smoke was thicker now and it was harder to breathe. But the little mother thought only of her babies and picking up another she hurried out and made the first long jump. By the time this one was safely in the old nest with the first one she was so tired that she didn't seem possible that she could reach it without being burned to death. But she did. Yes, sir, she did. The last of the babies was in the doorway and without stopping an instant she seized this one and was off again. The heat was so great and she was so tired that it seemed as if she must drop and give up to the Red Terror. But she didn't, and she didn't let go of that precious baby. And so at last she reached the others. (Copyright, 1925, by T. W. Burgess.)

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Bilioussness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation.
The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.
