FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1892. AN ENCOURAGING CHANGE.

We are pleased to see in the lucid repor of the City Auditor the following para-

Future Councils must thoroughly unde "Future Councils must thoroughly understand that it is utterly impossible, out of the ordinary revenue, to build new streets and keep in order those already made, especially as, during the next few years, large sums will be required to repair the streets along the line of the new sewers. Some measures will have to be devised for city during the past year."

When we advocated the principle here

recommended so strongly by Mr. Raymur, very few admitted its soundness. But reflection and enquiry have brought many round to our view. The principle of betterment tax is both equitable and practicable. It is only fair that the owners of property should pay for the improvements which greatly enhance its value. When the opening of a new street, draining it, and providing it with sidewalks and other conces make a property desirable and add greatly to its value, its owner should not complain that he is required to pay his air share of the cost of the improvements which benefit him so materially and which tend to enrich him. On the other hand, it is unfair that the whole body of the rate payers should bear the expense of improve ments which are a special benefit to him and his immediate neighbors. The fairness of the betterment principle must strike everyone who is capable of thinking. Its introduction will cause the improvement of the city to be more rapid and more certain. When property owners are not compelled to beg the City Council to make the improve ments they need, when all that they want of the Council is leave to pay for the unrestricted reciprocity has produced a improvements themselves, there will be great political change in the Province of ever since he had command of the Quebec little delay. The ready excuse, "We have Ontario, must have been surprised at the reasury, Mr. Mercier has been going at an no money," cannot be made, or the other result of the election in North Lanark. equally rapid pace. Although the Councils of this City nunciation of corruption had no scruple, Among such a people governmental extravathat obtains here, than does the Principal have been strictly honest; although almost when they thought it could be done with safety, to resort to corrupt practices on their own account. These records show that of the coitisens, yet the councillors have not been contained by way of loan, has been fully accounted for, and expended for the coitisens, yet the councillors have not been coitisens, yet the councillors have not been contained by way of loan, has been fully accounted for the coitisens, yet the councillors have not been coitisens.

The would concide shall be greatly mistaken and much disapered and interest and even Pacaud's boodling transaction, are not meither light nor easy, one would conclude that men who have had no experience in shat men who have had no experience in the city's affairs, would that of North Lanark. We do not believe imagine. If the clergy of the province reattempt what others, who are, to say the least, quite as well qualified as they are, have found beyond their strength.

Much is required of this year's council.

If the affairs of the city are to be well adsition quite clearly. ninistered, and if its credit is to be maintained many reforms must be made. The expenditures must be kept within the revenue, and still the necessary services must be maintained in good working order. The floating debt must be got rid of in some way, and the finances must be put on a good footing.

It should be put in a position to make the most of its resources. If things are allowed to go on as they have groe on of late years, the city's affairs will, before long, get into inextricable confusion.

Money will be spent to little advantage and the citizens will not have the comforts and the conveniences which their position, and the conveniences which their position as position according to the information sent us by our special correspondent—and he is well-into the most sensitive would have read the must be the feelings of those who have not his courage or his strength of nerve?

The public should be on the look out for troublesome dogs, and should not allow their owners to keep them where they can annoy passers by. A barking, fgrowling, snarling dog, big or little, is a nuisance which should assizes.

small business, with but few departments. requires all the thought and all the care of a man of good executive ability, it can easily be seen that a large business, comprising many tions men.

The duty, then, of the electors is plain. Let then throw over all personal considerations and vote only for the men whom they believe to be fit to do their duty. To vote for an unfit man is not doing him a favor. and it is doing the city a great injustice. Having the city well governed is a matter of much importance to every man, woman and child within its bounds. As far as his comfort and convenience are concerned, it is of more importance that the city be carefully governed than that the affairs even of the Dominion be well administered. The necessity of having good men in the City Council, therefore, must be apparent to all. Our advice to the electors is, vote for the nen who are fit, whether you like them or Excess of ordinary expenditure over not, and reject the unfit men even if they are your nearest relatives and most esteemed friends. If every elector does this, the Council of 1892 will be the best possible out of the material from which the selection is to be made.

The vicious dog case that was tried in the Supreme Court, on Tuesday, may have amused the audience in the Court room, but it belonged to a class of cases that are the reverse of amusing to the defenceless and suffering public. One thousand dollars may appear to many to be excessive damages for the injury caused by the attack of a cross dog, but there are instances in which it is impossible to estimate in dollars and cents the injury done to a person by a worthless, ill-tempered cur, kept, heaven knows for what purpose, by a respectable shows for what purpose, by a respectable and provided in the interpretation of the Mining acts will seriously intaken to the suprement, who have worked hard in the province, not only in the tsatesman's chair, where they have earned world-wide and just reputations for sagacity and uprightness, but also in the sterner, if not more arduous, labors of the mining fields!
