LACROSSE.
Newspaper men who wield the stick will remember the practice to-day at five. The time is short.

The Dominion of this city have also been challenged by the Toronto for a match a week from to-morrow.

The challenge from the Toronto to the Shamrocks was mailed in a registered letter by Mr. Malone Wednesday morning. A reply will likely be received on Tuesday.

There will be a good game on the Toronto grounds between the Toronto and the Shamrocks. It will be well worth seeing. Why don't the Toronto take the lacrosse players under their patronage? If they offered them a cup and allowed them to play on their grounds, they would soon have lots of material from which to draw recruits.

It is said that when asked to attend the administration of the sacrament she refused, saying that she did not care whether Carotta lived or died.

THE WAY IT WAS DONE.

An investigation into the escape at the Guelph prison, which was held on Tuesday, will still be fresh in the minds of our readers. The event caused a great deal of comment and enquiry as to the state of things which led to the escape being so easily effected, and an investigation has been made by Inspector Langmuir.

From investigation the following facts have been elicited: It appears that the evening previous to the escape the turnkey Beatty handed in to the prisoner Anderson, through the grate of the corridor, the keys of the cell doors in order to enable him to open the cells and put in the night buckets—an act which, it is needless to say, was contrary to regulations.

Anderson gave the keys to Jacobs, who took an impression of one of them on a piece of brown soap. This having been done, the keys were returned. The previous morning, when the prisoners were taken down to the yard to empty the night buckets, one of them had secured a piece of hard wood, known as a "knee," and the same day had lent Jacobs a knife for the purpose of making hair chains—while Jacobs, another prisoner, by means of this knife a key was soon whittled out of the wood.

On the night of the 23rd Crawford, according to his own testimony, went through corridor 4, which is said to be an irregularity on his part, and tried all the cell doors, finding them securely locked.

He then came out of the corridor and looked the iron gate through. The lock on this gate is composed of a spring bolt which is kept by a chain, and it is required that the bolt be turned after it has been slammed in order to make it positive that he had done this, but it was shown that he must have neglected to do it. Jacobs admitted that Anderson had opened the gate by means of a spoon, with which he shot the bolt back. About 11 o'clock on that night there was a ring at the front door of the prison, and Jacobs, whose duty it was to sit in front of the gate of corridor 4, to answer the door, went down stairs to respond to the ringing. While he was away—about twenty minutes—the three prisoners got out of their cells with the aid of the spoon and succeeded in making their way down to the area basement through the kitchen. The ringing, it appears, was done by the daughter of Governor Green, who had some one with her. Wright returned to his seat in front of the gate of the corridor, but was again summoned to let the prisoners out. On reaching the kitchen it was found that the outside door was locked, but by Jacobs, who was with him, the door was opened, and the three prisoners proceeded with pickaxes, an axe and a cleaver to pry open the door.

That the facts are in the main correct, is substantiated by the prisoners themselves, who, when questioned, acknowledged that the above was the manner in which they had made their escape. It is understood that Mr. Langmuir has recommended the dismissal of turnkeys Beatty and Crawford, and also of the night watchman. Other dismissals may yet be recommended.
