

O R, when birds were flocking,
He, with whistle mocking,
Them would wile together,—
Birds of every feather.

And when they around him
Thronged, he would astound 'em;
Shooting Finch and Sparrow
With his bow-and-arrow