My dear Sir Arthur.

What is the most astonishing part of y^r. entrancing gift to Jac is that altho the drum is so colossal & can ever be stood on by the drummer, that its sound is so deeply magnificent that nobody minds it, booming away in the distance, like Bertha sounded to Paris. When Jac describes his godfather's gift to him, I have seen his small face screw up in a knot to give significance to his description of its
