

---

There should be a play specialist appointed in every large city to put intelligence and enthusiasm into the movement for helping young people to secure proper outdoor enjoyment.

---

A boy's character is formed as much on the playground as in the school-room, perhaps even more so, for in amusements his individuality comes out more strongly.

SAVE THE SHORES FOR THE CHILDREN.

School buildings should be opened more extensively to the people for social centres.

---

The hearts of children go out in grateful affection to those who show a willingness to participate in their amusements, and through directed, well-organized play they can often learn more than in the classroom.

---