

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS (cont.)	PAGE
'Bid adieu, my sad heart'	278
Written after leaving her at New Burn	278
R.S.S.	279
R.S.S. Written in a fit of illness	280
To Delia	281
'Hope, like the short-liv'd ray'	282
Ode on Sir Charles Grandison	283
On the death of Russell	284
To Miss Macartney	285
An Ode	288
Lines during a period of insanity	289
Song of Mercy and Judgment	290
Ode to Peace	292
The shrubbery	292
'Heu! quam remotus'	293
The winter nosegay	293
The trial of Admiral Keppel	294
An address to the mob	294
A tale, founded on a fact	295
The bee and the pine-apple	296
The pine-apple and the bee	297
On the promotion of Thurlow	297
Human frailty	298
The yearly distress	299
The modern Patriot	300
The nightingale and glow-worm	301
A fable	302
The doves	303
A comparison	304
Another	304
On a goldfinch	305
In seditionem horrendam	305
Translation	305
On the burning of Lord Mansfield's library	306
On the same	306
Love abused	306
On the Biographia Britannica	307
To Mr. Newton	307
Report of an adjudged case	308
Love of the world reprov'd	309
Boadicea	310
Alexander Selkirk	311
The lily and the rose	312
Idem Latine redditum	313
Votum	314
Horace, Book II. Ode 10.	314