

The Circular Study

By ANNA KATHERINE GREEN (ROHLFS)

"No complication of motive or entanglement of plot seems too great for Mrs. Rohlf's to attempt in her remarkable tales of crime and its detection. She has elevated the detective story to a higher plane than any other contemporary writer. She has a positive genius for strong and original plots."—Boston Transcript.

The Fugitives

By MORLEY ROBERTS

A story of love and adventure in the South African war. The heroine, an attractive British girl, sends her lover to South Africa to rescue her sister's lover, who has been captured and taken to Pretoria. The narrative is spirited and the action moves steadily along. It is Mr. Roberts's latest and best book.

An Eagle Flight

By DR. JOSÉ RIZAL

Dr. Rizal was a Philippine hero whose memory is now made a religion among his compatriots. Of his self-sacrificing struggles for his country, and his tragic death at the hands of the Spanish authorities, little is known. His story is one of tyranny and patriotism, but he is too much the artist to approach it as a partisan setting forth abstractions in the guise of fiction. It is strong enough in such interests and emotions as are common to the human heart to stand simply on its appeal as a story.
