Justice Martin to-day admitted Dr.
Telford to $25,000 bail. He said the charge was very serious, the evidence being to the effect that Telford had given young McHarg surgical instruments to use on the girl. He said he also thought the jury might find that the girl was not responsible for the lacerated condition of the body, found by postmortem, but the prisoner.

This statement made by Justice Martin was made in answer to an assertion by Jos. Martin, K.C., Telford's counsel, that the evidence against the prisoner was of filmsiest character. Telford had volunteered the statement that he had never seen McHarg, which made McHarg's evidence as to Telford giving him an instrument to use on the girl more damaging.

Telford raised the bail this afternoon.
