With some beautiful exceptions, continual racial deneral Botha and Mr. Smuts are held in respect and esteem, but the old bitterness has not died down among the Boers in the country districts and the Boers in the country districts and then a tag year. Every body likes tag day and says, "Oh, it is such fan." You can't have enough of a good thing. Let all the maudlin sentimentalists of this village get tothere is a great deal of heart burning, but the veteran evangelist expressed his confidence that "another generation will do away with that, please God." That there should still be bitter remembrances is not surprising, the General Booth evidently sustained disappointment. The best hope of their passing lies in the gift of free selfgovernment and in the other profound government and in the other profound asleep. Then he begins. That impression came from the prevalence of unemployment, a circumstance in his opinion not sufficiently accounted for by the reaction after the exceptional war expenditures and the introduction of labor-saving ma- dor to Germany, the Holy Terror of the chinery in the mines and elsewhere. lions in things. He finds other and more permanent causes in the fact that natives are taking the place of white men. The negroes work for less wages and the whites refuse to compete by agreeing to a reduction of wages. As a consequence large numbers are emigrating to Australia and Canada and returning to Britain, and the general declares that if this goes on South Africa will soon be without a white working population. On the other hand the natives are increasing in numbers. Out of 10,000,000 of people between Cape Town and the Zambesi, 9,300,000 are natives, and in addition there are 100,000 immigrants from British India, who are taking away the local trade and driving white traders out of the country. The natives, said General Booth, are learning to work, and that they have political rights and in ten or twenty years both Boers and British will have to reproach themselves when the inevitable conflict of the native races is on them with all its consequences.

The general's chief advice so far as the white side of the problem is concerned is to "make a peasantry." Vast tracts of land were waiting for the plow and the spade. Why not get the men to go on the land? And he applied this to "the thousands
