FRANCE DOES HONOR TO A NOTED WOMAN

The liquor trade Paris statistics show that there are nearly three times as many cases of consumption between the ages of thirty-five and fifty-five as in any other occupation.

Cancer is rarest among farmers, railway men and miners, but not so rare among quartermen. Cab and wagon drivers are frequently attacked by cancer. This disease is extraordinarily frequent among chimney sweeps, brewers, and sailors in the merchant marine, but only the average number of fishermen die of it. Diabetes especially abounds among the liberal professions. Lawyers, doctors, druggists and clergymen are the greatest sufferers, and after them come in order: Butchers, printers, dyers, and commercial travelers.

The liquor trade is at the top of the list in the affections of the nervous system. Nervous diseases are far from being rare in Paris, for next to the sellers of drink in this particular form of trouble come street hawkers, casual laborers, and lime manufacturers. After examining a hundred other diseases, such as influenza, pleurisy, digestive and other troubles of all kinds, Doctor Bertillon turns his attention to suicide. Here again the liquor trade leads the list, followed in order by druggists, hatters, hairdressers, butchers, glass-makers, potters, cabmen, and metal workers. If any moral can be drawn from the statistics it is that diabetes in Paris is the only disease which has any pretence to respectability, and that the safest profession of all is that of a clerkman, for, according to Doctor Bertillon's statistics, clergymen have fewer diseases and live longer than anyone else.

The Romance of a Will

Some time ago M. Lefevre de Revel, an excise inspector, retired from his post and, not knowing how to fill in his spare time, began the task of writing his memoirs.

He made excellent progress and the number of volumes soon became amazing. He had them bound and gave them to his relatives and friends to read, and was highly complimented by them.

On page 540 of the 11th volume he wrote a will leaving his fortune (about $80,000) to various friends. At the 17th volume he died.

As some of his friends had the fortitude and perseverance to make their way as far as page 540 of the 11th volume, they all remained in complete ignorance of this will, and the next-of-kin took the fortune.

A short time ago—that is, about ten years later—purely by chance, the will was discovered, and now the friends named in the will have begun an action to recover the fortune. The Academie Francaise may also plead for a share to the amount of $4,000 under the will.

The Question of Food

Professor Armand Gautier has been asked to discover exactly what a human being ought to eat to be in good health, and in perfect spirits. This question has been so often mooted and so deeply studied by German scientists that Professor Gautier was embarrassed. But he suddenly hit upon an ingenious idea. The best thing was to take the average Parisian as an example. A real, proper Parisian, he argued, is always happy, always in good health, and in perfect spirits. He does not hesitate to devour other animals, his inferior brethren, in the shape of meat of all kinds, and he is at the same time an eclectic vegetarian without being a testoteller, for he will take his wine and even his absinthe when he can afford it. What the Parisian ate, again, can be established to a nicety from the retail receipts, which, compared with the number of inhabitants, will give the right quotient.

Professor Gautier, therefore, sought out the retail statistics, and the result was a brilliant one. There are exactly 2,800,000 inhabitants within the circle of the fortifications, and consequently within the circle of the retail receipts. These 2,800,000 eat per day and per person 1212 oz. bread, 1212 oz. of green vegetables, 12 pound of meat, 14 pound of butter, and 14 pound of cheese. The proportions of the minor articles of consumption are as follows, in metric grammes: Dry vegetables, 40; fresh fruit, 70; sugar, 40; eggs, 24; cheese, 8; and various fats, such as butter, etc., 28. Nothing more is needed to make a person healthy, happy and "spirited."

HEADACHY, BILIOUS, UPSET? "CASCARETS"

Bilious, Throbbing Headache Means Bowels Are Clogged and Liver Stagnant—You Need Cascarets

You're bilious, you have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes, your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile and your bowels are clogged. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you. Don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that most of the troubles of the stomach, liver and bowels can be quickly cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work with the bowels, and children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

"Wattle Day," which was observed by Australians in London, recalls the curious fact that nobody knows who discovered Australia. The honor has been claimed for the Chinese, Malays, French, Venetians and Spaniards, while cryptic references to a southern continent were made by Greeks and Romans. Probably the secret lies hidden among the voluminous records of the Dutch East India Company in the state archives at The Hague.

NEWS LETTER FROM BERLIN

Rise in the price of foodstuffs has necessitated a general increase in wages and consequently a material reduction in profits in spite of greater output, while the struggle for trade in the foreign market is becoming increasingly severe owing to greater competition, this is the outlook which confronted the German manufacturer at the beginning of the year 1913. For that sum represents the burden to be borne by all employers of "higher grade employees" following the introduction of the new law on the compulsory insurance of employees earning up to $1,200 per annum.

This new measure, the cost of which will be borne entirely by the employers and employees in equal shares, is designed to provide for employees a pension on attaining the age of 65, or before reaching that age in the case of incapacity for work, and in the case of death the widow and children also will be entitled to a pension. Every employee, male and female, whose work is not solely of a manual or mechanical nature, over sixteen years of age, and whose salary is under $1,200 per annum, must be insured. The monthly contributions to be paid are on a sliding scale according to the employee's salary.

The entire administration of this new branch of insurance is vested in the employers and employees with the state does not contribute in any form to the cost. The central power is entrusted to a director chosen for six years to assist the director. The director is assisted by a board of two representatives, each of the employers and employees, elected by each party. The director and the permanent officials employed in the central office in Berlin are the sole persons connected with the scheme who are not chosen by both parties directly concerned; the director is responsible to the imperial chancery. A board consisting of twelve representatives elected from among the employers and the same number of delegates of the employees is chosen for six years to assist the director. In addition, local committees formed of an equal number of elected representatives of both parties will be formed to deal with insurance matters requiring their attention within their sphere of action. Arbitration boards also will be provided empowered to settle all disputes regarding insurance claims.

During the first ten years the insured will not have the right to claim any benefits, an exception, however, has been made in the case of female employees, who will be entitled to benefits after five years. The old age pension payable on attaining the age of sixty-five and the invalidity pension paid by and on behalf of the insured, and amount to one-fourth of the total contributions paid in during the first ten years of insurance. After the first ten years, under the same conditions, he would retire on a pension of $400 per annum. It is evident that the benefits depend upon the length of time that the employee has been insured, and the longer he has carried a high salary the higher will his pension be.

The widow's pension (or widow's if the wife maintained her husband by her own earnings), amounts to two-fifths of the pension her husband received at the time of his death, or to which he would have been otherwise entitled to claim, and on her remarriage she is paid a lump sum in final settlement equal to three years' pension. Each child is entitled to an annual allowance up to one-third of the widow's pension (or the one-fifth of the case of orphans). It is interesting to note that the law provides that this allowance shall also be paid to illegitimate orphans of insured females.

Let us have as much good advice as we can get and give, but the legislative measures of the sportsists and the anti-gamblers may never preserve us."

Bonus Scheme for Miners

Vacuum Hythe publishes a special article explaining a bonus scheme for miners, an alternative to wages based on profits. As a grandson of Thomas Brassey, the founder of the famous firm of contractors, he takes a keen interest in the Colliery Company, in which the family have held large interests, and it is no secret that he has for the last two or three years been trying to get the management to adopt the scheme which he now puts forward in print. Lord Hythe has the plan with the most happy results in the sulphur mines in Sardinia, which he controls.

The scheme is based on the principle that capital has a right to its wages just as the workman has the right to his, and that when the wages of both have been paid the worker has the right to a share in the profits. The principal provisions, which are applicable to South Wales, are as follows:

A LOVELY BABY BOY

This Mother is quite Enthusiastic over a Well Known Food.

Mrs. J. W. Pateman, 34 Harriet St., Toronto, in writing about Neave's Food says: "When I first knew one of my friends, her baby Jack was eight months old and dying by inches. She had tried three foods because her Jack could not digest milk. At last, I fetched her a tin of Neave's Food. At the end of a month, Jack was rapidly gaining flesh and was bright and happy. He is a lovely boy now and she declares Neave's Food saved his life. And it did. Then I recommended it to a friend on Victoria Avenue. She had a baby 6 months old that was not thriving a bit. She put the baby on Neave's Food and at the end of three months, the baby was twice the size."

I have never seen two bigger, stronger boys than mine for their ages and we owe it all to Neave's Food. I have the utmost faith in Neave's Food. Mothers and prospective mothers may obtain a free tin of Neave's Food and a valuable book "Hints About Baby" by writing Edwin Usher, 14 Front Street East, Toronto, who is the Canadian agent. after he leaves the company's service. This is absolutely vital.

2. The workman is furnished with a booklet in which is set down every year the rate and amount of the bonus, the sum standing to his credit, and the interest upon it for the preceding year.

3. Only men who have been five years in the service of the company are entitled to participate. The qualifying period has been recently reduced to four years, and we may presently reduce it to three years' service. Lower than this I do not propose to go.

4. The worker reserves to himself the right to modify the regulations governing the fund.

The wages of capital have been fixed at 5 per cent, which is very low for such a risky business as mining.

The workman who fulfils the above conditions is credited with a percentage on his wages equivalent to any dividend above 8 per cent, distributed to the shareholders.

The main advantages of a scheme on these lines are:—

(1) The capitalist makes no sacrifice until he has received a reasonable rate of interest on his capital.

(2) The worker makes no sacrifice, and he accepts no conditions, and there is, therefore, no ground for any discussion with the trade union on the matter.

A further important point in the scheme is that the bonus is not distributed annually. A bonus distributed year by year should be tantamount to an increase in wages to the workman in the more profitable collieries, and could not be applied in the South Wales coal field without producing serious discontent among the workmen in the less profitable collieries.

The workman must have a living wage wherever he is working, and the present system of regulating wages cannot well be abandoned. A bonus scheme which accumulated capital for the worker by a share of profits would not be open to legislation against or regulation of gambling.

Proving by Actual Experiment

This experiment will always interest the children, and will provide a good deal of thinking. The explanation, of course, is that the lighted piece of paper which is inserted into the inverted glass drives out most of the air, so that when the mouth of the glass is quickly put down into the water there is very little air, and consequently, very little pressure above the water within the glass. Hence, the weight or pressure of the air on the water outside the glass drives the water up into the glass to occupy the space from whence the air was driven by the burning paper.

A practical demonstration of this kind is always more convincing than any mere statement. This is particularly true of medical remedies.

The effect of the anti-toxin treatment for diphtheria is noticeable within a few hours, so that everyone must believe in its virtue. In a similar way, the treatment known as ORANGE LILLY gives a practical proof of the progress it is making in curing women's disorders, and that, too, within a few days after commencing its use.

All authorities agree that in every case of women's disorders there exists a congested condition of the womanly organs. The circulation in these parts is sluggish, stagnant, and the result is that the broken-down tissues or waste matter, which should be carried off if the blood was circulating freely, remains in these parts, causing inflammation, irritation, oppression of the nerves, etc. ORANGE LILLY is not taken internally, but is applied direct to the suffering organ. It is absorbed into the circulation, and its antiseptic properties at once act on the waste matter referred to above. The consequence is that this waste matter, which is matter of inflammation, ulcers, nervous troubles, etc., begins to be discharged, and it continues to be discharged until all the foreign matter is removed from the system. At the same time the blood vessels and nerves are toned and strengthened, and the nervous trouble disappears, the circulation is restored and good health ensues.

Toronto, Ont., June 2, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah.—I wish to tell you that Orange Lily is doing me a great deal of good. These ulcers came away one or two every week, and I have less pain and fewer headaches. I feel sure I will be perfectly cured in a little longer time.

The explanation of the wonderful cures performed by ORANGE LILLY is very simple. It is a scientific remedy, based on the discoveries of Pasteur and Lister, degrees and development only, so that a positive remedy, as ORANGE LILLY is, need with all the certainty of a chemical experiment. In order to convince every suffering woman that ORANGE LILLY will cure her, I make the following
