Helping The Investor

It is at all times the endeavor of the staff of our Statistical Department to be of direct service to the investor in selecting the right class of securities.

What might be an attractive investment for one man, might not always be the class of investment which should be recommended to trustees or even to people of more limited means. The larger the field the greater the chances of the risk. What the investor must seek to know is just how much chance he can take in his endeavor to make money.

The service of our Statistical Department are at your service, whether you are buying or selling.

BOY SCOUTS OF CANADA REVIEWED

This is probably the biggest review of boy scouts yet in Canada. It shows a portion of the 5,000 scouts gathered at Toronto from all over Canada last week, being reviewed by Earl Grey, chief scout for the dominion. They are marching to the grand stand for the review.

SULTAN OF TURKEY IS INTERVIEWED BY BRITISH PRESSMAN

W. T. Stead Describes His Call Upon The Ruler—Refreshment in Diamond-Crusted Cups

In the Review of Reviews, W. T. Stead gives an interesting account of his interview with the Sultan. As His Majesty speaks only Turkish, the presence of an interpreter was indispensable. This difficulty was altogether removed, he says, owing to the kind offices of Touth Bey, the court chamberlain, who speaks English admirably.

Mr. Stead was received in the Dolma Bagiche palace, which he describes as "one of the most beautiful in Europe, and much the most beautiful in Constantinople." Standing close to the water's edge of the Bosphorus, its windows, he says, look upon a scene of beauty to which two continents contribute, but which neither continent can excel.

Cups Diamond Crusted

The editor having partaken of refreshment, served in cups set in silver hollows thickly crusted with diamonds, was shown into the presence of the Sultan by an officer in khaki uniform.

His Majesty is described as a man somewhat below middle height, slightly stout in body and somewhat slow in his movements and in his speech.

Wearing the inevitable red fez, his eyes shined with a somewhat vacant expression. He wore a moustache and his beard was trimmed short. He struck Mr. Stead as having a kindly disposition, but as he says, it would not yet get his bearings or felt his footing firm enough to show his own feelings.

The Sultan, apparently, was not eager to speak. He paused a little before he framed his sentences, but answered in a way that showed he was listening attentively, and was sometimes reflecting already.

Mr. Stead, being informed by the chamberlain that he might speak freely, made the most of his opportunity, though, as he says, it would not be right to publish a faithful transcript of a conversation touching upon the functions of constitutional government in modern states, the advantages of their position as compared with that of autocrats, the doctrine of ministerial responsibility, and the danger of confounding the person of the monarch with the policy of his advisers.

"It was," Mr. Stead adds, "not an interesting, and to the Sultan an unprecedented experience."

"I thank you," His Majesty, said as he concluded the interview, "I thank you very much for all you have said to me. I hope that I shall profit by your words."

The court chamberlain told Mr. Stead many things about the Sultan's kindness of heart, and of his ready sympathy with distress. During his tour in the provinces on nationalities around him and stand in the midst as a father. Indeed, "the enthusiasm chamberlain," "His Majesty is the real father of his people."

THE AGENTS OF DISUNION

In the province of Quebec the Nationalist allies of Mr. Borden are instilling into the minds of the people fear and hatred of the British. In the English provinces Mr. Borden's partisans are seeking to arouse popular fear and hatred of the United States, a friendly nation lying along the Canadian border for three thousand miles. Can these conflicting elements give Canada good government? Can these appeals make for harmony of races in Canada and the growth of friendship among the peoples of the Anglo-Saxon race? Can unity be promoted by disunion? Has patriotism become a by-word, and the Union Jack a mere cloak for unscrupulous politicians who seek to attain power? Was there ever a meaner campaign than that which Borden and Bourassa are waging together against the best interests of Canada and the Empire?

MARATHONS FIND WATERVILLE EASY

The Waterville team apparently unable to measure up to the fast pace set by the home team, played a losing game on the Marathon grounds this morning. The Marathons scored three in the first five innings and then piled up twelve more, while not a Maine man crossed the plate.

The lineup was as follows:

Waterville	Catcher	Marathons
Labholt	Pitcher	Connolly
Rodgers	First base	Tarbell
Lafleur	Second base	McFar
Devlin	Third base	Fraser
Piper	Short stop	Williams
Lafleur	Center field	Nelson

In the sixth inning a change was made in the line-up of the strangers. D. Lafleur went into the box, Rogers to first and Simpson catcher. During the remainder of the game bad errors and some good hitting gave the locals a chance to roll up the score to a total of 15. By innings it shows—

Waterville . . . . . 2 0 1 0 0 5 4 3 15
Marathons . . . . . 0 9 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 9

THIS EVENING.

STRAIGHT FRONT TO GO; CURVES THE FASHION

The Latest Dictum in Ladies' wear is Announced in France for This Fall

(New York American)

Here's the joyful news: Woman is to come into her own. Those with suggestive tendencies, who may be misled by the old rule and assume a virtue, will be allowed to vote may sit down. It isn't that. She is to cease wearing the straight front, which makes her look like an ancient narrow chested pecking case. It has been decreed in France that curves are to be worn.

Those that have them may wear their curves. Those that have them not may follow the old rule and assume a virtue. The main thing is that the stout female who has been miserable for years when in public, taking short breathes and saying, "No thanks, I have had enough," when her appetite would have permitted her to eat a porcherouse steak with trimmings is to have a little freedom.

Her thin sister who has been what fashion has ordered, and who was at ease in the steel and armor plate that made her look like a hat rack with clothes hung upon it, is to go to the background, or to the good modiste, who will do the rest.

This fall the lady with the curves gets her innings. Just how she has managed to bring it about is a secret. In some way however, she has induced the designers of the other side to give her a chance, and the report reached the country yesterday through experts, that curves are now displayed on the Rue de Paris, Trouville. The straight line has disappeared.

Of course to the man who accepts things as they come along, and has ceased to care whether women wear straight lines or curves, it makes little difference. Experience has taught, if he has passed the wooden wedding stage of his career as a family meal ticket, that in the long run whether they wear straight or curves, about four times a year the question is presented to him whether it is better to carry a sandwich from home or take a fresh air stew a few times a week for luncheon.

But to the woman who preferred to stand because of the misery caused by sitting down, in a revised edition of thirteenth century armor, the return to curves will be hailed with joy.

Hereafter she can eat in comfort, but greater than that will be the knowledge that she has something on her slimmer sister. She is to be it naturally, with a misplaced pin at any time may cause the less favored one to flatten out like an automobile tire that has come into contact with an upturned tack.

Of course, with the return to curves there are to be other changes. Dresses are to be open in the front at the bottom, showing lacy, so the stout woman with Chinese feet and high instep wearing high heels will be decidedly in it.

That man, mere man, will have an opportunity to borrow a little money and prepare for the change in style, it is assumed for trimmed hats are to be the thing. Bands about the hair, with crowns of silver and gold, will also give the family meal ticket a new incentive to work overtime.

Foulard of an eastern or Persian design is being used as the foundation of a gown, which is veiled with some flimsy fabric. The effect is very striking and gives the appearance of embroidery.

FINE LIBERAL MEETING IS HELD AT BLACK RIVER

In the interests of the Liberal candidate James Lowell, a fine meeting was held at Black River on Saturday night with a large attendance. Mr. McNeil was chairman, and the speakers were Mr. Lowell, Rev. J. J. MacKinnon and W. J. Mahoney. The speakers were well received and given every assurance that that section of the county will be in line with the other portions in giving the Liberal candidate a great victory.

CAREY A GREAT PLAYER.

Max Carey, Pittsburgh's outfielder, is perhaps the most sensational young player that has jumped into the major league baseball since the day of "Ty" Cobb's entry. Carey is a brilliant fielder as well as a hard hitter, and Fred Clarke surely picked up a jewel in this hustling youngster. Carey is of temperate habits and, as a matter of fact, is a preacher in the off season. Everything points to a great future for the preacher-bat player.

DIVER TO SEEK THE BODY OF BOY DROWNED IN WEST END SUNDAY

Several Companions on the Beach at the Time—Sister Sobs Out Awful News to Mother At Home

Warren Boushey, aged 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Boushey, of North street, was drowned yesterday afternoon while bathing at Beatty's Beach. In company with his two little sisters, Mamie, aged 10, and three North street boys, Gus Johnston, aged 14; Percy Moore, aged 15, and Wesley McNair, aged 14, he arrived at the beach between 2 and 3 o'clock. He expressed his intention of going in for a swim and, as the tide was low he was able to get out to the swimming raft, where he undressed. Those on the shore watched him wade out some distance and suddenly disappear.

A remarkable feature of the sad affair is that until the younger sister, Eva, arrived home about 4 o'clock or later, no time was known of the fatality. The Johnston family said this morning, "The Times reporter that while sitting on the beach he suddenly noticed one of the Boushey boys' arms stick out of the water and then disappear. He says that when he told others that Boushey was drowned they made light of it. He said also that a policeman came along the track and when asked why he did not notify him, he explained that he told little Eva to do so, but instead she came over home. There is no explanation why some one of the three kids did not go for assistance."

Mrs. Boushey, who is prostrated with grief, said the first she knew of the fatality was when her little daughter Eva came home crying. At first she would not say what was the matter, but after considerable urging sobbed "Brother has gone." The mother said that Warren could not swim and she had warned him not to go into the water. The intention is to have Edward Howard, a diver, go down this afternoon in an effort to locate the body. Grappling all the forenoon has been without result.

"He must be rich. He owns an automobile." That proves nothing. You ought to hear him squeal every time the price of gasoline goes up another cent."—Detroit Free Press.
