The question whether the federal government should enact a law restoring separate schools, or otherwise modifying the educational system of the province, was the cause of the great political agitation and disturbance in Quebec. It is idle to say that the peo departments. The agents met in special ple of the east need not have troubled themselves over the question. It is the very people who objected to interfering with the province who have the right to be disappointed with the poor suport they received from Manitoba. What makes the attitude of the prairie province all the worse is that on previous eccasions it had declared in the most emphatic way that it intended to abide Women with pale, colorless faces, who feel weak and discouraged, will receive attempts at interference. ed, but the answer that Manitoba gives is neither distinct nor intelligible. No-body knows what the province wants. It declares in the election that there must be no federal interference with its educational affairs; it declares in another election that it was indifferent whether interference took place or not. It has put its friends in the east to an enormous amount of trouble defending its cause and then ignored their efforts and acted as if it were very little interested in the result of the struggle. It is not fair to blame the whole population of Manitoba indiscriminately this triffing and vacillating course. There were many who were consistent, and voted in the federal as they did in the provincial elections. The conduct of those who cast their ballots against exercion in the provincial election and they see a proposed sides during then for any cause changed sides during the critical period through which we have just passed is exceedingly disap-pointing to those who relied upon their intelligence and steadfastness.
