AMERICAN HOUSE,
BOSTON.
RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF THE OLD PLAN OF MANAGEMENT.
LEWIS RICE, Proprietor, respectfully announces that he has resumed the old plan of management as it existed before the recent alteration. Trial of the European system in this Hotel, proves, that although the advantages are great, yet the plan is better adapted for the smaller class of hotels.
The accommodations and conveniences of the House are unsurpassed, and the recent improvements and alterations, for the comfort of guests, leave nothing to be desired.

Keating's Cough Lozenges
A SAFE AND CERTAIN REMEDY
FOR Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness,
AND OTHER AFFECTIONS OF THE THROAT AND CHEST.
IN INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, AND WINTER COUGH they are unfailing. Being free from every hurtful ingredient, they may be taken by the most delicate female or the youngest child, while the PUBLIC SPEAKER and PROFESSIONAL SINGER will find them invaluable in allaying the hoarseness and irritation incidental to vocal exertion, and also a powerful auxiliary in the production of scientific expectation.
Prepared and sold in Boxes and Tins, of various sizes, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., No. 79 St. Paul's Church Yard, London. Sold retail by all Druggists in the whole world.
N. B.—To prevent spurious imitations, please to observe that the words "KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES" are engraven on the Government stamp of each box, without which none are genuine.

IMPORTANT TESTIMONIAL.
24, Wine street, Bristol.
Sir,—It is with much pleasure I have to inform you of the benefit I received from your Lozenges. I was attacked with the typhus fever, during which time I had a violent cough, so that it kept me awake the greater part of the night. A friend persuaded me to try a box of your "COUGH LOZENGES" which I did and am happy to say that with only one box of your valuable compound I was quite free from cough.
You can make what use of this you please, for I think such valuable medicine ought not to go unnoticed.
I remain, Sir, your obedient Servant,
WM. T. TRUSCOTT.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS!
CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.
HOLLOWAY'S PILLS
The blood from this the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.
USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.
HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.
ALARMING DISORDERS.
Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.
GENERAL WEAKNESS—NERVOUS COMPLAINTS.
When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.
DELICATE FEMALES.
All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensative organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should if to have them within her reach.
SCIENTIFIC ENDORSEMENTS.
The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Female Complaints	Piles
Bowel Complaints	Headaches	Stone and Gravel
Coughs	Indigestion	Secondary Symptoms
Colds	Influenza	Venereal Affections
Chest Diseases	Inflamation	Worms, of all kinds.
Costiveness	Inward Weakness
Dyspepsia	Liver Complaints
Diarrhœa	Lowness of spirits
Dropsy
Debility
Fever and Ague

C. D. EVERETT & SON,

THE PALE LADY

BY M. J. WITHERELL.

I was seated one pleasant afternoon on the banks of the lovely D., whose waters wound among magnificent hills and flowed through the quiet little village in which I had lately taken up my abode. I was always a lover of the beautiful of nature; art in my opinion could not be compared to it. I could wander for hours through the trackless forest gazing with an eye that never tired of the beauties there displayed. A storm in all its fury was delightful to me; thunder's peal, the lightning's glare was music to my ear, beauty to my eye. I sat gazing on the lovely scene before me when suddenly the sky was obscured by the thick black clouds; the lightning glared, as though in accordance with my thoughts the elements had sent forth their beauty to charm me. The road near the place where I was seated was narrow, and on side it almost touched the river's bank. A fright ful place to the traveller on such a time as this.

My meditation was broken by the distant sound of carriage wheels. They came nearer and nearer, and I started in alarm on beholding the pale, frightened looks of the postilion. He drove two spirited horses, and though he was a strong, athletic man, he could not check their plunging, rearing motions. On they came at a fearful rate. It seemed as though at every bound the carriage must be dashed in pieces and the inmates hurled on to the rocks below. I sprang forward, but too late. The wheels had passed too far over the side of the road and the next moment carriage horses and all that was attached were thrown from the road with a deafening crash, which sounded almost above the thunder's loud peal, like the knell death. I covered my face with my hands to shut out the horrible scene, but a cry loud and long rang on my ears.

"Save, oh, save my father. He will be dashed to pieces."

I looked and my heart sickened at the sight. An old, white haired man was clinging as for life to the carriage, which was broken, though still attached to the horses which seemed mad with affright and the pain the bruises they had received in their fall. The blood was streaming from their many wounds, and one seemed almost dead; he would stumble, and fall, then rise again to rush furiously onward. The postilion lay in the last agonies of death; his head frightfully bruised and bleeding profusely, one limb crushed, and it would almost seem a pity that was so lately full of life and health should be spared to lead a life of helplessness and inactivity. I leaped from the bank and stood beside the dying youth. He raised his eyes to mine and said faintly:

"Save Sir George; he is too kind, too good to die thus."

I ran to the rescue of the old man, who, now disengaged from the carriage, lay insensible. In my heart I thanked God that my profession was one which enabled me to be of service to the poor unfortunates. I raised the old man to a sitting posture, and opening a vein in his arm had the satisfaction of seeing him revive and cast a fearful, half inquiring look around.

"My child is she dead?"

"I am here, father; not much hurt. I shall soon recover from my bruises. But you I fear are badly hurt."

"Yes my child, I feel that I shall not long remain with you. And what will become of you, in a land of strangers, far from friends, with no one to watch over you."

"Do not talk of dying, dear father; you will recover from this and we shall be so happy!"

"No, no, my child, do not flatter yourself; for your sake I would remain, I know that I must go. Come nearer; I would clasp your hand and gaze upon your face once more."

I felt the pulse of the old man and knew that the hour of his dissolution was near at hand. As I stepped back the lady cast a look of earnest inquiry on my face. I shook my head, for I could not bid her hope when the death angel was present. She moved to her father's side and took his hand. She started, and I saw that she guessed the fearful truth.

"Helen, when I am gone return immediately, if your health will permit, to our native land. It is a cold, heartless world in which I leave you. But I know your kind heart will gain you many friends, and it will not be long ere we shall meet again. Helen, where are you? Is it dark? Come nearer, child, and let my eyes rest on you again."

Ah! 'twas not the darkness which stood between him and his child. The film of death was gathering over his eyes, and resting his head upon her bosom he breathed his last.

When she knew that he was really gone her eyes, which had till then remain dry, filled with tears. Her grief was not loud, but there was in her countenance a deep, soul felt sorrow, which was more eloquent than words. She gazed upon her father's form with a quivering lip and blanched cheek. At length with a wild shriek she fell forward, and clasping his stiffening corse to her bosom she sank into unconsciousness. In this state she was conveyed to the inn. Morning dawned and Helen was in a fearful delirium. She raved continually of her father, and the fearful scene through which she had passed seemed even before her eyes. 'Twould try the stoutest nerves to stand by her side and listen to her ravings. Large tears would fall upon her snow white face and roll silently down and drop upon her hands. She would raise them to the ceiling view, and while an unearthly laugh would fall on the ear she would exclaim.

"That is the blood of my father. He was a kind father, but he has gone and I shall soon meet him. I cannot stay here alone. No one loves me here. The air is cold; I will go to my father!"

It required all the efforts of her attendants to keep her in her room. For days and weeks she was thus unconscious, and as I look at her pale emaciated face I felt it was a blessing that she heeded not her misery. She had evidently been long an invalid; her sunken eyes and wasted frame attested it, but even now she was beautiful. Daily was I in attendance in her sick room. She would gaze upon me at my entrance, and a light would illumine her dark soul, seeking as though some faint recollections of the past in her mind; a few incoherent words would escape from her tongue and then she would relapse
