NANTUCKET INVADDED BY SCHOOL OF PORPOISES

Fishermen Have Their Business Temporarily Ruined.

Nantucket, Mass., July 30.—The bluish and weakfish fishery was brought to a sudden end today by an immense school of porpoises, which surrounded the island, driving the bluish away and slaughtering the weakfish.

Some of the boats report that hundreds of weakfish floated on the surface of the water, having been killed evidently by the porpoises. Some of the fishing steamers ran off ten miles south of the island, but found the porpoises almost as thick as near the shore.
