"And is this the British Justice; is this the fair play that gentlemen opposite are prepared to give?" he begins speaking in measured tones, and in a voice which is heard all over the house and finds its way up to the galleries. "The hon. gentleman denies to the Government of Canada what would be given to the meanest thief—time to have his witnesses present." Sir John then reviewed in bitter, caustic words, the course Huntington caustic words. the course Huntington had taken in going to Montreal instead o

Having done so he took up the statement of Huntington that "If delay be granted, the Government will have an opportunity to deal with my witnesses," and in the keenest sarcasm taunted him with keeping company with men of such bad character, and with charging the Government with such with charging the Government with such a terrible crime upon the statement of men whom he believed could be bribed, and become perjurers. the whole proceeding, and showed that the government had taken a straightforward course from the day the charge was brought, Sir John closed with an appeal to the House to grant the delay asked for. "It would be manifestly unjust," he said, "to allow a portion of the evidence to go to the country. Let the accuser and the witnesses for the prosecution and defence give their testimony; then let judgment be given, and the Government will abide by the result. But do not force us to a trial when our witnesses cannot be heard. Do not hound us down because we are public men, and the leaders of a party. In God's name let this investigation go on, but give us the same fair play and justice that would be ex-tended to a common criminal. the Government side were going to let the case rest with the speech of their leader. After a time it became ridiculous to hear members repeating each other's speeches. The only original one made was that by E. B. Wood, otherwise called "Biz Thunder," in the course of which he remarked that "the Government ought to be in such a position that the breath of scandal couldn't wag its tongue against them." This bull was only surpassed when in tragic tones he vociferated that "the sword of justice like the sword of Damocles was susjended over the government, and would soon burst in thunder upon them."

A general expression of surprise ran round the House when

MR. ANGLIN ROSE TO SPEAK. Then came the storm. Some hissed, numbers attered the most doleful groans, while desk lids clattered, and desks creaked as do the timbers of a struggling ship in the grasp of the storm. Yet there stands the figure of a man with a very white face, wildly tossing his arms and moving his lips, but no man's voice could rise above that horrible din. Bedlum was at last eclipsed. Other members rose, and appealed on Anglin's behalf. He began again, there was a general stampede, and in a few minutes the only men on the Government side were the Ministers. Had the members gone out first, it would have been a more dignified course to pursue.

The Government are now squarely on their trial. If they be guilty of the terrible charge brought against them, they will not be slow to give up the trust they have betrayed; but if they be innocent,
