mother Mrs. Beattie, at Burlington,

Monday's tide brought a number of deep sea fish up the Cornwallis river, and it being an unusual occurance, it caused quite a sensation. Men and boys alike who had shot-guns and rifles made use of them. They succeeded in killing one Monday evening when the tide was going out. Then 'Tuesday morning's tide brought in several more, and the people gathered from all quarters and tried again to capture more of them. This time they killed two, getting them both ashore. The largest one measured over nine feet in length, weighing 650 lbs. No one seemed to know just what they were, but people from Hall's Harbour said they were a species of Albacore, and that they were seen there in numbers every year. We hope they will have disappeared from the Basin before the of his nephew Roy Sheffield early last 1918.

The Popular Rudget

At last the taxes are beginning to be lopped off. There is a bit off this one, a bit off that one, and a trifle off another. Not very much, to be sure, but something. And every little helps. What a business it is to make up a nation's budget—the task for a whole department. And what a business it is to control the budget of a household—perhaps even greater. For, while the nation's budget can easily cover a deficit by adding to that bear-all, the national debt, the household budget must balance correctly week after week, month after month, year after year. Can you wonder, therefore, that careful and farseeing managers see in the quality and value obtainable at Chase's the opportunity of making the most popular appeal to the domestic tax-payer?
