The family.

TIRED MOTHERS. A little elbow leans upon yout knee, Your tired knee that has so much to bear A child's dear eyes are looking lovingly From underneath a thatch of tangled hair, Perhaps you do not heed the velvet touch Of warm, moist fingers holding yours so tight You do not prize this blessing overmuch You almost are too tired to pray to-night

But it is blessedness ! A year ago] I did not see it as I do to-day-We are all so dull and thankless, and too slow To catch the sunshine till it slips away, And now it seems surpassing strauge to me, That, while I wore the badge of motherhood I did not kiss more oft and tenderly That little child that brought me only good.

and."

And if some night, when you sit down to rest, You miss this elbow from your tired knee-This restless, curling head from off your breast, This lisping tongue that chatters constantly If from your own the dimpled hands had slipped And ne'er would nestle in your palm again : If the white feet into the grave had tripped, I could not blame you for your heart ache t

I wonder so that mothers ever fret At little children clinging to their gown ; Or that the foot prints when the days are wet, Are ever black enough to make them frown. If I could find a little muddy boot. Or cap or jacket on my chamber floor : If I could kiss a rosy, restless foot, And hear it patter in my home once more

If I could mend a broken cart to-day, To-morrow make a kite to reach the sky-There is no woman in God's world could say She was more blissfully content than I. But, ah ! the dainty pillow next my own Is never rumpled by a shining head ; My singing birdling from its nest has flown; The little boy I used to kiss is dead. -From the Aldine.
