STRONG PROTEST

Against a Law That Permits Hunters frespassing

On Farmers' Lands-How Mr. Richardson, o' Morpeth, Views the Quail Question.

To the Planet.-I read with interest "the views of a farmer who feeds the quail as reported in a rekent issue of The Planet, and would suggest as a commendable thing to do that all who perform similar acts of kindness send their names to the papers for publication coupled with the request that the government radically amend that the government radically amend the so-called game laws as to prohibit under an adequate penalty the pursuit of, all kinds of innocent game with dogs, and restore to the farmers the right of keeping their premises intact from the annual raids of the whole pot hunter's fraternity. As you are aware, the common law of you are aware, the common law of trespass has vitually been set aside by obliging the farmers to post "No Shooting" notices of a certain size otherwise the action for trespass fail no matter how flagrant the offense I have had notices shot to pieces and I have had notices shot to pieces and torn down. At the Eau the infuriate blackguards go about as if they were monarchs of all they survey.

The fault lies with the government pandering to the gun clubs, who virtually dictate terms, presumably for political considerations.

The government should give the farmer the right under a penalty of protecting all "game" so called, and thus encourage the breeding of insec-tivorous birds, and discourage the heartlessness and cruelty so prevaheartlessness and cruelty so preva-lently manifest in the wholesale de-struction of innocent undomesticated animal life. As an instance of the viciousness of bird dogs, I may say that I have had a valuable flock of that I have had a valuable flock of domesticated wild turkeys destroyed, domesticated wild geese dicimated and nearly ruined by sporting dogs. The "bird" dogs have a penchant for wild fowl, and will scent and destroy them, in flocks of domesticated poultry, and without touching the tame birds at all C. W. RICHARDSON.

Troubles of a Comedian. One of the comedians of "That Man" company is in trouble. He makes his head-quarters in this city, and when he went out on the road he failed to take his trunk with him. Feeling the need of certain toilet accessories, he telegraphed his wife, who lives up town, to send the trunk to New Haven,

The trunk didn't come. It had gone astray somewhere, and the comedian was angry, very much so. When he left New Haver he again telegraphed his wife. This time as follows: "Am going to Hartford to-night.

Doing my best to get trunk." On his return home he found Mrs. Blank at her mother's the house broken up, and a chrome of himself that had decorated the mantel in the parlor, turned to the wall. A tear-stained telegram lay on the table, and it read as follows:-"Am going to Hartford to-night. Doing my best to get drunk." Mr. Blank's suit against the telegraph company for alienating his wife's affections will come up shortly.

A Woman's Advice.

TO SUFFERERS FROM NERVOUS-NESS AND HEADACHES.

Mrs. Robins, of Port Colborne, Tells How She Found a Cure and Asserts the Belief That the Same Remedy Will Cure Other Sufferers.

Mrs. Daniel Robins, of Port Col-borne, Ont. is one of those who be-lieve that when a remedy for disease has been found, it is the duty of the person benefitted to make it known, in order that other sufferers may also find the road to renewed health. Mrs. find the road to renewed health. Mrs. Robins says: "In the spring of 1897 my health gave way and I became my health gave way and I became completely prostrated. Nervousness, palpitation of the heart and severe headaches were the chief symptoms. The nervous trouble was so severe as to border almost upon St. Vitus dance. The least exertion, such as going up stairs, for example, would leave me almost breathless, and my heart would palpitate violently. My appetite was very fickle and I was appetite was very fickle and I was much reduced in flesh. The usual remedies were tried, but did not help remedies were tried, but did not nelp me, and eventually I became so weak that I was unable to perform my household duties, and the headaches I suffered from at times made me feel as though my head would burst. I was feeling very discouraged when cure in a case much resembling mine through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills came to my notice and I decided to give them a trial. After decided to give them a trial. After using two boxes I found so much relief that I was greatly rejoiced to know that I had found a medicine that would cure me. I continued know that I had found a medicine that would cure me. I continued using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills until I had taken eight or nine boxes, when I considered my cure complete. The palpitation of the heart, nervousness and headaches had disappeared; my appetite was again good, and I had gained in weight nicely. I regard myself as completely restored and I would urge other women suffering as I did to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and I am sure they will have equally good reason to sound their equally good reason to sound their

There are thousands of women There are thousands of women throughout the country who suffer as Mrs. Robins did, who are pale, subject to headaches, heart palpitation and dizziness, who drag along frequently feeling that life is a burden. To all such we would say give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. These pills make rich, red blood, strengthen the nerves, bring the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks, of health to pale and sallow cheeks and make the feeble and despondent feel that life is once more worth living. JUST A DOG

But "Nellie" Had No Soul-She Rushed In to a Cable Car.

Nellie was a beautiful, Titian-haired setter. Her eyes were more trusting and expressive than those of most Her form was as graceful and alert as that of a Spanish ballet dan-She was honest, gentle, affectionate and loyal. She would not harm a mouse. She had never kined anything. She avoided a democratic buildog as she would the dog-catcher. She even looked with a sympathetic eye or two upon cats. She was never angry with any one or anything.

But Nellie had no soul. When she was a puppy Mr. Hamilton had purchased her for his little boy, Harry, who was then three years old; but that was three years ago, and Harry was now six, and Mr. Hamilton had been dead over a year, and Harry and his mother and Nellie lived alone across the Tiver, in a small New Jersey village.

When Harry was not at school he and Nellie were inseparable. He used to wonder which loved each other the more, Nellie or Nellie's master Hamilton was very poor, and growing poorer every day.

One fine morning Harry Hamilton felt some one tugging at the bed-clothes, and on looking to see who it was he discovered Nellie. Her beautiful eyes and manner showed that she had something of the greatest importance to communicate or to show

Harry jumped out of bed and went to the foot of it to find three of the prettiest little puppies in the world. Wild with joy, he looked at Nellie, and as she ap logetically and with timid pride returned the look with an uncertain wagging of her splendid tail the little chap stooped and cried: "Where did you get them, Nellie?"

Then Nellie barked and Then Harry dressed and ran down to tell his mother of the great good fortune. Ars. Hamilton tried not to look grave, and succeeded fairly well, with Harry; but Nellie felt a sadness creep into her soul—no, breast—heart—that made her tail stop wagging.

That was four months ago. A week ago the owner of the cottage n which the Hamiltons lived roughly told Mrs. Hamilton that she had no cause to complain of lack of money while she could feed four dogs, and that the best hint he could give her was to sell them. Then he told her how she could sell them.

So that is why Mrs. Hamilton, Harry, a basket containing three pupples and Nellie were standing on Broadway, near Eighteenth street, the other morning. On the basket was a sign, which read:

.. THOROUGHBRED SETTER .. PUPPIER, IS EACH.

.. A handsome carriage drew up to the curb and a fine o'd lady, with a beautiful young lady, alighted. They were about to ente a l. dies' furnishing store, when the younger lady saw the puppies, curled up in the basket to keep from shivering for it was one of the coldest days of the winter. The young lady was not a great while about buying one of the pupples, and as she got into the carriage and drove off with it Nellie's eyes almost left their sockets, and Harry's heart filled his mouth so that he choked.

In about five minutes one of the editors of a great New York daily came along and bought another. He just slipped it under his great coat and dropped twice the price asked for it into Mrs. Hamilton's hands, then called a cab, got into it and drove Again Nellie's eyes tried hard to leave her head, and again Harry's heart flew to his throat. Half an hour later a Wall street broker rushed up, cried:

"Thank heaven, I'm not too late! dropped a $10 bill into Mrs. Hamilton's hand, grabbed the last of Nellie's children, jumped on a car and disappeared Mrs. Hamilton said to Harry:

"Come home."
Harry gulped to Nellie:
"Come home, Nellie." Nellie deliberately ran into the mid-dle of Broadway and full tilt into a down-rushing cable car.
But Nellie had no soul.—John Ernest

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt, giving the various ingredients to be used, so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the recipe free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L. W. Knapp, M.D., 1710, Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free recipe streported in this paper. "Well, I am Mrs. Theophilus Wintergreen and I would like to know how much money Mr. Wintergreen has on deposit here. I know this is where he banks, for he has one of your check books in his desk, but he will never tell me how much money he has nor anything about it, which is something every married woman ought to know, and no husband who has any respect for his wife's feelings would keep from her, but though I've asked Mr. Wintergreen many and many a time, he either tells me that his book hasn't been balanced for so long that he doesn't know, or else he evades the question altogether and puts me of, which I think is a downright shame, and so I thought I'd come right down to headquarters myself and find out. Wintergreen, Theophilus is the name.

"Madam," replied the teller, "we are not allowed to divulge anything regarding our customers' accounts." "Not even to their wives?"

"No, not even to their wives." "Not allowed to tell, ain't you?" "No."

"Then I'd advise you to quit calling yourself a teller." And Mrs. Wintergreen flounced out.
