"Hecla" Furnaces certainly do cui down coal bills.

Take the Cast Iron Combustion Chamber, for instance.

I make it heavily corrugated (or fluted). This almost doubles the heating surface — enables practically twice as much air to be heated with the same amount of coal or wood.

As the combustion chamber is really a continuation of the fire-box, I make it of extra heavy iron, corrugated to allow for the contraction and expansion and to ensure greater durability.

Then my FUSED JOINTS make the "Hecla" dust-tight, smoke-tight, gas-tight.

Write for catalogue of "Hecla" Furnaces and Peninsular Stoves and Ranges. Send me a rough sketch of the house, and I will send you an estimate of the cost of installing a "Hecla" in your home. All free. Address the "Hecla Furnace Builder," care of

NO MAN IS STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

MO MAN 15 STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

Let the greatest athlete have dyspepsia and his muscles would soon fail. Physical strength is derived from food. If a man has insufficient food he loses strength. If he has no food he dies. Food is converted into nutrition through the stomach and bowels. Is depends on the strength of the stomach to what extent food esten is digested and assimilated. People can die of starvation who have abundant food to est, when the stomach and its associate organs for digestion and nutrition do. not parform their duty. Thus the stomach is really the vital organ of the body. If the stomach is weak the body will be weak also, because it is spon the stomach the body relies for its strength. And as the body, considered as a whole, is made up of its several members and organs, so the weakness of the body, as consequence of "weak" stomach will be distributed among the organs which compose the body. If the hody, is weak because it is ill-nourished that physical weakness will be found in all the organs-heart, liver, kidneys, etc. The liver will be torpid and inactive, giving ries to billousness, less of appetite, weak nerves, feeble or tracular action of heart, application, distinces, headache, backnots.

A HOVABLE CLIMATE.

James B. Hammond's Device to Make Weather to Suit Himself-Great Boon for Invalids.

Thirty years of acute suffering from Thirty years of acute suffering from neuralgia is the medium through which James B. Hammond, of New York, president of the typewriter company which bears his name, declares he has discovered an invention which will not only provide great relief to those who suffer like himself, but will enable any one who has the requisite means to create an atmosphere suited to his needs in any season or in whatever quarter of the globe he may chance to

In other words, he intends to take and portable house with him wherever he goes, and with it apparatus whereby he will supply the house with the quality of air necessary to alleviate the torturing pangs of his disease.

Already he has a completed model of the house, which has been tested for several months, and has procured provisional patents on the device in England. A larger model twenty feet square is now being constructed, and the next step is to be the full size habitable structure, which will have its first practical test in the moist climate of England. Mr. Hammond believes that we have the structure will be adopted in such countries as India, and that hospitals will be equipped with these specially constructed houses where the vigors of any climate may be overcome.

cially constructed houses where the 'tigors of any climate may be overcome.
He says rows of these houses could be operated together.
Mr. Hammond's experiments in extracting the humidity from New York air began in Ardsley Hall, Central Park West, several years ago, and were car-ried to such a state of perfection there that he was able to maintain a uniform degree of temperature and humidity, and from that accomplishment develand from that accomplishment developed the plan for the portable house. For many years Mr. Hammond has been a mystery to weather observers in various parts of the country. A score of local weather bureaus, perhaps, would receive on the same date an urgent telegram from him asking them to wire immediately "state of wet and dry bubb", and any other information as wire immediately "state of wet and dry bulbs" and any other information as to climatic probabilities. Such tele-grams as these were received from Mr. Hammond in Saratoga, Toronto and other places on a recent afternoon.

His whole frame was wrenched and twisted with such excriticating pain that he could no longer bear the agony and telegraphed to find where conditions were most favto find where conditions were most favorable for relief.

Propped up in an invalid's chair, with a servant constantly at his side to apply such remedies as were at hand, Mr. Hammond talked of his invention and what he hopes it will achieve for humanity. He could speak only between spasms of pain, but explained that "these spasmodic twinges are so much pledsanter than the continuous performance." fоплипсе."

"The old saying that necessity is the "The old saying that necessity is the mother of invention is particularly true in my case," he said, "because it became necessary for me to get relief in order to live, and I have too much to eccomplish in this world to die. There is nothing new in changing the atpassphere in a room or a building, but I have discovered that it is entirely practical to carry your atmosphere with you.

"All that is needed is an electric wire to operate such blowers as are necesand that is needed is an electric wite to operate such blowers as are necessary, a refrigerator and the necessary apparatus for driving the moisture out of the air. In my experiments in Ardstey Hall I succeeded in reducing the numidity in my apartments from 99 to 15, and this can be done just as well as a portistic and succeeded in the succeede in a portable house wherever there is electricity and a refrigerating plant. "Since I became an acute sufferer I have been driven from one country to another because of climatic conditions, and often have had to leave when busing the sufference of the sufference o another because of climatic conditions, and often have had to leave when business of the greatest importance demanded that I should remain. I was driven out of London only a short thee ago and went to various parts of England where I had found relief before, but everywhere the saturation of the air was so great that I fied to New York. Here I got little relief until the chante came last night.

"Now I intend to take my house and my atmosphere with me and live where I please, I might say I will take up my house and walk. After I have given the thing a thorough test and it has proved successful, as I know it will, I expect to see the idea adopted in various parts of the world where the climate is bad. A letter I saw from a hospital in Bombay to a great refrigerating concern recently added to my conviction that my idea of transforming the climate will be of great advantage to humanity. This letter asked if it were not possible to contrive some
