Rochester, N.Y., Dec. 18.—New York Central train, No. 57, known as the Buffalo local, a fast train running between New York and Buffalo, was wrecked near Palmyra yesterday afternoon, the engineer was fatally injured, and the entire train, with the exception of one Pullman, was burned to the trucks.

A collision between local freights knocked the caboose and a heavy coal car over on passenger track No. 2.

The crew instantly started to flag the passenger train, which they knew to be due, but before they could hardly leave the train No. 57 hove in sight with two monster engines.

The caboose did not amount to much in the path of the engines, but the heavy coal car threw both engines off the track, and they tipped over on their sides and slipped down the embankment.

Everyone in the passenger cars were badly shaken up, but none were injured.

Engineer Harris of Rochester, who was in the first engine, and who, by sticking to his post, probably saved many lives, was dug out from under the wreekage, terribly injured.
