Successful replace of Fortune.

Gen. "Kald" Leiten, the young English soldier who led 67,000 troops to a victory which placed Mulai Hafild on the throne of Morocco, is visiting this country. He won his commission at the age of twenty-one for gallantry on the field during the Boor war, attributing his success in that particular engagement to "your Yankee rapidation guns." He was the youngest captain in the army at twenty-three, In 1603 he went to Morocco and cast his fortune with Mulai Hafid, the pretender to the throne; who was tinally successful.

It is the custom in Parls for the cok to do all the marketing. This adds considerably to the cook's introduce; for every dealer allows her five centimes — one cent — on every franc — or twenty cents — she spends. So French cooks insist on their marketing prerogative, and the mistress who denies it to them is deemed a very mean, small, niggardly sort of a person. IT WAS A SURPRISE

"We have the surprise beautifully planned," sald young Mrs. Westerleigh to the guests, "and Frank doesn't suspect a thing. I think he has even forgotten that to-day's his birthday. He will get home from the office at about seven o'clock. Then he always goes upstairs to take off his cost and put on his smoking jacket for the evening. When he is upstairs I will call out suddenly, 'Oh, Frank, come downstairs — be quick! The gas is escaping.' Then he will rush down here and find the crowd of friends waiting for him."

It went exactly as planned. Westerdigh came home at the regular hour and went directly upstairs. The hidden guests held their breath while will have been the control of the con need look no har her to explain empty pews.

There is no virtue that mere men believe in and fewer men practice. Many of us, it have be not respected in the unterly fattle attempt to run a bloof on the rost of the world. From pillow shows and false fronts to indicate a runthe buildings and watered stocks, things are larvely when they seem.

The chief anxiety of too many people is to keep up appearances. If they are poor, they must at any rate appear to be rich. If they are ignorant, they at least affect culture.

Be a real man—not a shoddy sperior a shown off toward, so sincere with yourself, your friends, and your work.

or a season of fortal, he sincere with yourself, your friends, and your work. With sinceria a few talents and a little strength may go far. Without it, gerlus itself must fail!

TALENT AND TACT

Talent is something, but tact is everything; talent is serious, scher, grave, and respectible. Tact is utilitat and more, tec; it is not a civil sense, but it is the life of all the five it is the quick one, the midging it. The life was the midging the life keep smell, fact it is the concept, the quick ear, to judging his the keen smell, the lively touch it the keen smell, the lively touch it the interpreter of all riddles, the strength of counter of all difficulties, the array of all chatcles; it is useful a solitude, for it shows a man his may into the world; it is useful in scalety, for it shows him his way through the world. Talent is power—tact is skill; talent is well to—tact is momentum; talent is well to—tact is momentum; talent knows what to do—tact knows how to do it; talent makes a man respectable,—tact makes him respected; talent is wealth—tact is ready monog.

For all the practical purposes of life tact carries it against talent ten life tact carries it against talent to to one Talent is fit for employment, but tact is fittest, for it has a knack of slipping into place, with a sweet silence and glibness of movement as a billiard ball insinuates itself into the pocket, it seems to know everything without learning anything — it has served an invisible and extemporaneous apprenticeship, it wants no drilling—it never renks in the awkward squad — it has no left hand, no deaf ear, no blind side — it puts on no wondrous wisdom, it has no air of profundity, but plays with the deof profundity, but plays with the de-tails of place as dexterously as a well taught hand flourishes over the keys of the planoforte, it has all the air of commonplace, and all the force and power of genius.

ordegroom in another and the bride in still another, is an innovation in weddings

The Rev. H. B. Minton, sitting in his study, united in marriage George Prentice, at his home in Northboro and Miss Mary De Wit, who at that moment, surrounded by relatives and friends, was sitting in the parlor of her home, at Blanchard.

Coin is a small town five miles north of Blanchard, and Northboro, three miles west of Blanchard, is about the same distance southwest of the pactor's home.

At the appointed hour the minister got the DeWitt and Prentice homes on "the line," and when everything was ready the bride and bridegroom, each holding a phone to their respective ears, were married.

When they answered, "We do," the parson said, "Join hands over the wire." The reloinder was: "We have."

The clergyman repiled: "I pronounce you man and wife."
