No brother's hand to class his own,
When the closing eye grew sear'd and dim,
To speak in the dear familiar tones,
That sounded so sweet in youth to him;
No sister's presence there to shed,
A holy calm o'er the couch of death,
To raise the sufferer's throbbing head,
Or watch the coft and gasping breath.

When the light of love is round our bed, And tender, earnest friends are nigh; When home its soothing influence sheds, But to be alone, and feel the breath Grow short and hurried, and the even lim with the gathering must of death; Oh! then 'tis doubly hard to die.

ENGLAND.

I thread the wood, I rob the bedge, and young urchin.

I thread the wood, I rob the bedge, and glad content is mine,
Although they lack the orange branch, pomegranate, date and vice,
I over not the richest fruits exotic regions show,
While England has its hazel-nuts, its blackberries and alose,
I'll ask if there's a British boy whate'er may be his rank,
Who does not dearly love to climb his native bramble bank,
Who would not rudge for many a mile to gain a nutting track.
Proud of the crook'd stick in his hand and basket at his back?

HOAXING LEARNED SOCIETIES.—The broadest and most laughable attempt of this kind we ever heard of, is related by the venerable Matthew Carey, of Judge Breekenridge the elder. The Judge, it seems, had a mortal antipathy to philosophical so-feities, which was the more remarkable from his beginning a scientific and well read man. But he at length explained the mystery by stating that he had been rejected by the American Philosophical Society, of which he was a candidate for membership, in revenge for a democratic vote he had given in the legislature of Pennsylvania, against what was termed the "province against what was termed the particularly directed.
