Substitutes for Sympathy.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Have you met that type of person," writes a letter friend, "who, when you are telling her how hard you have to work to keep three strenuous and well and happy, and your house in order, without any help, and how fearfully tired and nervous and sick of it all you get sometimes, answers without a spark of sympathy. 'Well, most of us have been through it. I had four children in eight years, myself,' or something to that effect? And doesn't it make you feel as if you had had a slap in the face?"

I have, and it does. When one asks for the bread of sympathy, one does not want the stone of an 'I've-stood-and-I-guess-you-can-attitude'.

The Biggest Lesson of Suffering. And the person who offers it shows he has missed the biggest lesson of harsh experience, which is to be able to give sympathy to those who are facing such experiences.

"Not to have learned sympathy through suffering, is to have failed in life."

A similar job's comforter is the person who reminds you how much worse off someone else is than you. I suppose it ought to help us to remember that sort of thing, but somehow it doesn't, very much. It's about as hard to comfort yourself for the aching loss of a dear relative by hearing of someone who has lost his whole family in some holocaust, as it would be to satisfy one's hunger by reading over the menu of a banquet.

Moreover if the person who calls your attention to the misfortune greater than yours, is himself snugly free from misfortune, this insistence that you be thankful for your comparative immunity somehow lacks force.

Nothing Comforts Like Genuine Sympathy.

When a person is having a hard time and comes to you for sympathy, the best thing you can give him is just sympathy—just tender recognition of his sufferings, and the feeling that you are truly sorry for him. ready-made optimism, no fine sounding exhortations to courage, can help so much as that.

To be sure, having given that, you may find some word of encouragement to offer, some tale of a misfortune which looked as black as his and which afterwards came out all right, some phrase of cheer that has helped you. But these should be added to sympathy, not substituted for it.

MAKING UP PALE EYEBROWS.

Some folks do not approve of make-up, and others admit that a little of it does not harm, while the majority will agree that it is a woman's birthright to be beautiful and that if Nature overlooked her, she may be excused when she resorts to false methods of obtaining it.

Nothing gives the face a more insipid expression than the colorless eyebrows. By massaging the flesh lightly every night and with the faithful application of vaseline before retiring it has been proven that even the hopeless looking pale eyebrows will take on a new growth.

It is slow patient work, however, and it may mean several months of massaging and vaseline applications to produce the slightest degree of eyebrow interest. In the meantime the eyebrows remain pale and insipid.

The purchase of an eyebrow pencil which comes in all shades of brown and also black, is the only solution for the problem. When using the pencil be very careful not to apply it too heavily and special care should be taken to follow the curve of the eye. Then pencil itself is made of a harmless greasy substance and can do no injury to coming growth of the eyebrows.

THE UNINTERESTED CLERK.

I went into a store, one day, to spend a portion of my pay; I needed something that I thought the merchant had to sell; I stepped up to a weary clerk, who seemed not over taxed with work.

And unto him my little want I undertook to tell. "It's not in my department," he said in a haughty way to me, "Well, do you know," I asked of him, "if it is in the store?"

He yawned and slowly shook his head, but as he turned away he said: "I don't. Perhaps you'll find it on the forty-seventh floor."

He did not ask me to explain what I was eager to obtain. He did not try to understand what I had come to buy; He might have had, for all he knew, an article my work to do; He might have made a sale to me if he had cared to try.

But he put on a stony face; he did not wish to solve my case; He was not interested in my little wants and needs; And so I promptly quit the store and never go there any more.

When I want bolts and nails and pipe and hose and garden seeds. I'm truly sorry for the clerk who has no interest in his work; He wrongs his boss and does himself a grave injustice, too; The customer must sell himself the goods upon that merchant's shelf.

Because that youth will never show a thing that's not in view. A clerk should make it easy for the stranger entering the store; He should not make him feel that he's a nuisance and a care. When purchasers with coin come in, their friendship he should try to win. And they should know when they depart that they were welcome there.

Your Boys and Girls.

Broths are good to give children in summer. Chicken, beef or mutton may be used as the basis of broth. Use a pint of water to each pound of the meat. Put the meat on in cold water and allow it to come to a boil, then lower the fire so that it will barely simmer for three or four hours. Or prepare it on the fireless cooker as directed for soup.

When the meat is tender, remove it and add enough water to take up the original amount of liquid; strain through a wire sieve and set it away to cool. When cold the fat may be removed in a solid piece, leaving a clear liquid or jelly. Heat a small portion, seasoning with salt only. Broth has little or no nutritive value in itself, but if added to milk or thickened with arrowroot, corn starch, or gelatin or eaten with dry bread crumbs it will become a real food. If it is desired to use the broth at once, pour out a little into a bowl or soup plate, and set the dish on the side or in pan of very cold water.

Prunes are also good occasionally. Wash them well through several waters, then put them to soak overnight. Cook them the next day in the same water. It will take only a little cooking to make them tender. A little sugar may be added, but for a baby it is best to omit the sugar, as the fruit has its own sugar. The clear juice is laxative. In the second year the cooked fruit may be squeezed through a colander and the strained pulp given the baby.

Household Notes.

Sweet spirits of nitre will remove ink stains from wood. Rub the spirits with the nitre until the wood turns white and then with a soft cloth dipped in oil or kerosene.

Using a warm iron when cutting out clothing will do away with pinning the pattern to the material. Lay the pattern down on the cloth and press lightly with the warm iron.

It is said that flowers keep longest in a vase filled with soapuds. They should be taken out of the vases every morning and allowed to lie in fresh cold water for a few minutes.

The more the colors chosen for a room lean to neutral or gray, the freer you can use them together. It is when colors are clear and positive that one should go carefully.

When your hands are rough and catch and cling to the silk or satin which you are sewing, rub a little vinegar on them and allow it to dry. This will make the skin smooth.

INTO GERMANY.

WALT MASON

I hope before this war is done, and we've suppressed the frightful Hun, our men will march on German soil, and sundry treasured landmarks spoil. The German people ought to know just how it feels to have a foe shoot up their houses and their kirk and overturn the whole blamed works. They should be given half a chance to see what deals were wrought in France, their cities made an aching void, their sauerkraut factories destroyed; they ought to see the bombshells burst among their fields of winerwust and see the flash of snickerbones beneath their waving pretzel trees. I would not advocate their plan of dealing death to damage and man, of slaying babes and damping priests, for allied soldiers are not beasts; but I would see our men in line somewhere along the storied Rhine, and have them rake the country well, and show the Teuts that their door, they'll soon forget the years of acre, and say it's what they're yearning for, when some mad ruler lusts for war. Oh, let the Teutons have enough of all this blood and carnage stuff.

FIGHTING IN SIBERIA.

LONDON, To-day. Virtually all of west Siberia is under control of the Czechs-Slovaks, according to a Reuter despatch from Peking, dated July 10th. The despatch says that the Bolsheviks have been overthrown in the whole region from Tobolsk East of the Ural to Smolensk, 75 miles to the south-east, near the Chinese frontier. The trans-Siberian railway is under Czech-Slovak control, from Tcheliabinsk, in Ural Mountains, at the junction of the branches of the road which leads to S. and N. from Russia. Krasnoyarsk, 1300 miles to the east. The report confirms earlier despatches to the effect the Czechs-Slovaks in Irkutsk have been defeated by the Czechs-Slovaks.

NEW GERMAN UNITS.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES ON THE MARNE.—(By the A.P.)—A large German patrol, which attempted to raid the American trenches on the Marne front this morning, was routed in confusion. The Germans left many dead, which aided the Americans in establishing the identification of new German units.

LINER SINKS SUBMARINE.

NEW YORK, To-day. A German submarine, which attacked the American liner, Lake Forest, 1500 miles off Cape Henry, while the steamer was returning from a recent voyage to Europe, is believed to have been sunk by the steamer's guns after a two hours' running fight, according to information received here to-day in marine circles. The Lake Forest was formerly the War Fox, plying on the great lakes.

LOCKING THE DOOR.

LONDON, To-day. Parliament to-day debated the question of the treatment of alien enemies and persons of alien origin, which has been the subject of much discussion recently in the press, and on which a committee of the House of Commons in July issued a report. The committee recommended the immediate internment of every enemy male alien over 18 years, except those who for medical or other reasons should be exempted, and the repatriating of all female enemy aliens except those whose husbands had been granted exemption from internment. The committee recommended the immediate discharge of all such persons employed in any Government Department and that all enemy businesses should be wound up within three months. Sir Geo. Caye, Secretary for Home Affairs who opened the debate referred to the public anxiety on the question, said he believed this anxiety was due to insufficient knowledge of the steps taken to protect the country from anything like alien danger. The Home Secretary said it was true there was anxiety even among thoughtful and reasonable men as to what might be the effect of so large a number of aliens in England, and that it was the duty of the Government to take all reasonable steps for the safety of the country. Such outrages as the sinking of hospital ships, Sir George said, must affect the point of view from which the question was approached. If the enemy permitted acts of that kind, enemy subjects must suffer in the estimate which all decent people formed of them. The Government proposed, he said, to ask the committees in each country to undertake the revision of all exemptions from internment, to have the case of men, and exemptions from repatriation in the case of women.
