Duison, that we southt to inflame him in the discharge of his important duties. There is no truth in the assertion, and the Maristrate's action ill

office." [Hear, hear.]

Ald. Linds y also addressed the council in the same with. "Geatlemen," he said, "the worthy leader of the council is quite right in calling our attention to the grossly unfair insimations made against the council as a whose, but I claim the privilege of being heard in defence of myself, since I am directly accused of making statements that I never made. The Magistrate in his reply keys that 'One member has openly stated in the connecil that their object was to bend the neck of this hangbity and arrogant magistrate, and 'I feel that respect for the commission which I hold from the Government of this province impels me to refuse to yield to the attempts of these men to tend me to their will.' Again, 'They would like to bend the neck of the magistrate, or, in other words, they would like a subservient tool on the bench.' office." [Hear, hear.]

"I never desired to interfere with the juncial discretion of the magistrate or attempted to do so, and the words I made use if in council were as reported: "The neck of this haughty and arrogant magistrate must be bent to ins duty." There is a wide difference between bending a person for sinister pur posses and bending him to the faithful distributes of his duty.

TAR

The purposes and bending a person for sinister purposes and bending him to the faithful discharge of his duty.

"It is the daily duty of the magistrate to weigh often with great nicety the evidence beto r him. In this case he has raisifed the record and uttered untruthful evidence on which he assa to be judged. By doing she he maked himself open to the imputation of answering his accusers by means that are value and cowardly—false because he misquite the evidence against him, cowardly because he makes perfidious and unjust insinuations against the aldermen.

"In this way he smirches and does not do justice to the commission which he holds from the Government of this province and under which he has called his God to with estimate the discriminates that he would do right to all manner of men without fear, tavor, affection or file-will. If at his daily task of judging on the evidence adduced between the guilt and innocence of those brought before him he discriminates no better there than here, adjudges people guilty on evidence that does not exist, let us hope that the great God above will protect those who are innocent."

The Indians i Canada number more than % as many as the Indians in the United States. Yet, strange to say, there are no ghost dances and no eager awaiting of the Messiah ameng the Canadian Indians. But, then, the Indians in Canada are not blessed with such a luxury as a great government bureau and with such kindly protectors as agents and post-traders. Why should they dance nightly ghost dances in the light of the November moon and pray for a Messiah to come quickly and relieve them of their pale-faced friends and benefactors?
