

these words "They went to his heart,—carried home, as I hope and believe, by the Spirit. The poor creature sought that night a dark corner of the close in which he lived—and did what he had never done since he was 15 years old,—he prayed. From that day he was never absent from our open-air preachings, and when they ceased he followed those who adjourned to our large Bridgegate school-room, and ever since has been one of our most regular and earnest hearers,—Long since he has again got employment under his old master; and we have ascertained, from sources independent of himself, the truth of his story. It is only within the last two weeks I ever heard that such a case had occurred, and I have ventured to mention it to the Presbytery, to the praise of God's glorious grace, and for the encouragement of my brethren, many of whom I know are carrying on missionary efforts of the same kind. Let us sow in faith, and in due time we shall reap if we faint not."

After several of the members of court had expressed their minds with respect to this very interesting case, the Presbytery unanimously agreed to grant authority to the Free Tron session to superintend the administration of the Sacrament to such of the applicants as in their judgment ought to be admitted to the privilege.
