

A MILITARY NUMBER.

THE March "Canadian Magazine" will be a Special Military Number. The articles will be full of information for the general public concerning an army in the field and an army in time of peace. The organization of the Second Contingent will be described, and official lists of the officers given. The departure of the Laurentian and Pomeranian will form the subject of an article written by a Nova Scotian journalist who witnessed the various scenes in connection with these two events. Special pictures of officers and men on and off parade will be given with the different articles.

The cover has been specially designed. It is a presentation in colours of a street scene, in which the Canadian Mounted Rifles appear. This is so arranged that in the foreground—the most striking figure in the picture—is an officer, dressed in khaki with felt hat, mounted on a magnificent charger. The cover of the Xmas Number, representing a North-West Mounted Policeman was much admired. This cover will be equally attractive in design, and printed in suitable colourings.

Frederic Villiers will continue his war experiences. Mr. Champion will give another article on "Famous Canadian Soldiers." J. Castell Hopkins will write of "British Policy in South Africa." Malcolm Ross will describe "The Types of Artillery." Captain William Wood is the author of an article on "An Army In The Field." Phil Wales, an ex-British Soldier, will relate his experiences as a private on service in India. Charles A. Bramble will write of Bears in his Big Game Series, and there will be a few short stories and articles not of a military nature.

Orders for Copies should be placed early. Hundreds of people were disappointed in not getting a copy of our First Contingent Number. This will be even more profusely illustrated, and will be in greater demand. There will be a dozen illustrations showing the experiences of the First Contingent in South Africa.
