The Peace and Security Bookshelf Grant

The Institute is now holding its annual "Peace and Security Bookshelf" competition, offering a number of $500 grants to public and secondary school libraries wishing to develop their collections in the areas of peace and security from a Canadian perspective.

This initiative fits into the Institute's mandate from the Parliament of Canada to collect and disseminate information on issues of international peace and security, and to encourage public discussion.

This is the third time that the grants are being offered. This year, secondary school libraries are included because of the growing attention of students to this field.

Interested libraries are asked to apply to the Institute with a letter indicating why they could use such a grant. If the application is accepted, they will receive a cheque, a bibliography, and suggestions for the promotion of the collection.

Two bibliographies have been compiled, one of French-language items and one of English-language items. These list the most up-to-date, in-print Canadian materials on peace and security, from a variety of viewpoints. Annotations are included, and there are sections on Reference Works, Magazines, Books for Adults and Books for Children.

The bibliographies are freely available to interested groups or individuals, regardless of whether or not they are applying for the grant.
